TENSION HIGH IN HOLY LAND; BRITISH HUNTING MORE JEWS

JERUSALEM, Nov. 4—British planes patrolled a 200-mile stretch of Palestine's shoreline today in a search for two shiploads of Jewish illegal immigrants reportedly approaching territorial waters.

Reliable sources said approximately 10,000 Jewish refugees were expected to attempt entrance into the Holy Land before the end of the year, despite Britain's immigration ban.

SIX ATTACKS ON WOMEN CHECKED

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 4—Six women figured in abductions and criminal attacks in this area over the week-end, police said today.

Mrs. Morgan C. Penn, wife of an investment banker of suburban Bexley, told police that two young men, whom she described as young, slender, and between the ages of 20 and 25, pulled their car up beside hers and said her car was on fire.

One of the men slid into the seat beside her and the two cars drove off. Four miles distant the auto belonging to the men was wrecked and in the excitement Mrs. Penn got into the car of a motorist who had stopped to help. The abductors fled in Mrs. Penn's auto.

The two men then, according to state highway patrolmen, abducted a Springfield woman driving a car with Illinois license plates near West Jefferson. A West Jefferson resident told patrolmen he saw both autos racing through the village with the woman screaming for help.

The Springfield woman was put out of her car in Springfield. Her car was wrecked west of Springfield, Mrs. Penn's car was wrecked near West Jefferson. The men were believed to have fled on foot.

Lewis Hay, 38, a farmer; William G. Hay, 36, his brother and a carpenter; and Henderson Prince, 19, an iron worker, all of Amlin, were arrested on a charge of abducting and attacking an 18-year-old Columbus girl.

She told police they called for her on the pretense that a friend of hers had arranged the date. She said she was criminally assaulted by two of the men and escaped through a field to a nearby farm house where she called police.

Another Columbus woman told police a man stuck a knife in her back as she stood on a street corner, took her to a vacant garage, criminally attacked her, and robbed her of $1.50.

Still another Columbus woman was struck on the head with a bottle by a man who attempted to attack her, according to police. She was robbed of $2.

Another local woman kicked a man who attempted to drag her into an alley, escaping unharmed, police said.

BILBO HEARING SLATED RIGHT AFTER ELECTION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—The senate was investigating committee will hold hearings right after the election, on charges that Mississippi war contractors built and furnished a "dream house" for Sen. Theodore C. Bilbo, D., Miss.

Bilbo's affairs are slated for scrutiny just as soon after tomorrow as enough senators can get here to hold the hearings, it was learned. The committee headed by Sen. Harley M. Kilgore, D., W. Va., is said to feel that the "dream house" and other charges should be examined before the new congress convenes in January.

According to assistant committee counsel Francis D. Flanagan, "statement and documentary evidence" gathered by the committee indicate friendly relations between Bilbo and three Mississippi war contractors.

GOP Gains Seen On Election Eve

DEMOS CLAIM THEY WILL KEEP HOUSE CONTROL

Republicans Contend They Will Win Majority In Senate And House

BY LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Nov. 4—Republican house and senate gains seemed inevitable today as the general election campaign for control of the 80th congress ended in a splatter of oratory.

For the first time since 1928 the Democratic party has campaigned without the spectacular leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt. His successor, President Truman, ducked the campaign altogether. Administration and Democratic candidates generally have been on the defensive.

Commodity and food shortages gave the Republicans a blistering issue which was aggravated by a scarcity of meat. Midway in the campaign Mr. Truman was compelled to abandon his hold-the-line price control program and the lid is off on most items. A cabinet crisis over foreign policy compelled the President to fire Henry A. Wallace, his secretary of commerce, who was the administration's most effective link with the left wing of the new deal-Democratic coalition.

Although congressional losses are inevitable, Democratic spokesmen claim they will hold the Republicans short of control of either house of congress. Republicans insist their gains will be sufficient to take the house of representatives by a comfortable margin and, perhaps, to win the senate.

Polls and surveys suggest that the house will go Republican this time and that the senate will be close either way. If so, this general election will end 16 lean political years for the Republican party. The G.O.P. lost the house after the 1930 election and lost the senate and the White House in 1932.

Democratic campaigners warned voters that loss of the house or senate would paralyze government. But few, if any, of them believe the administration can maintain its present congressional membership intact. The disputed question is how many seats the (Continued on Page Two)

GBS ENDORSES HENRY WALLACE FOR PRESIDENT

LONDON, Nov. 4—George Bernard Shaw today endorsed Henry A. Wallace, former U. S. secretary of commerce, for president of the United States.

Shaw's "nomination" came in a brief message to the 60th anniversary meeting of the Fabian society, Britain's leftwing literary and professional organization. The Irish playwright was one of the founders of the group in 1884.

"The only message I have for the moment is that the Fabian society, having made Russia a great Fabian state, has now to make (Henry) Wallace succeed Franklin Roosevelt as president of the United States," Shaw's message said.

Breaking and Entering School Blamed On Horse

Old Dobbin faced a possible charge of breaking and entering, Monday, as a consequence of a Halloween night prank.

The horse was found last Friday morning in the auditorium of the Scioto Township school at Commercial Point. Obviously the equine had been led into the place by Halloween celebrators.

After considerable investigation work Deputy Sheriff Vern L. Pontius Monday turned over to George D. McDowell, county superintendent of schools, the names of 7 youths, ranging in age from 16 to 21, who were the alleged ringleaders in the horse-in-the-school epic. The report showed that two are ex-Army men and two are former Navy men. Three of the

Millions Will Continue To Live On Meager Diets

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—The agriculture department said today that the diets of millions of people throughout the world will be nearly as meager this year as they were last winter and spring.

Nations dependent upon UNRRA for help will be particularly hard hit. The relief agency stops buying for Europe on Dec. 31, and for Asia about three months later. Relief then will go on a cash basis.

The agriculture department said that although most countries will eat better than last year, there still may be an acute world shortage unless available supplies are stretched to the utmost.

World food production is up seven per cent, it said, but this increase will be cancelled out by a reduction in food reserves, the fact that much of the increased output is in inaccessible areas, and a seven per cent jump in world population since before the war.

"On a per capita basis," the department said, "food supplies for the current consumption year are about five per cent below prewar."

"The demand for exportable food supplies promises to be nearly as great during the 1946-47 consumption year as it was in the past year while exportable supplies, in terms of calories, may be no larger."

As a result, many countries—particularly those needy nations which soon will lose UNRRA's help—must continue their spartan diets, rationing, and other food conservation measures to stretch their meager supplies.

The department said the amount of cereal grains available for export may be somewhat smaller be-

COAL CONFABS RESUME TODAY IN WASHINGTON

Government Says Both Sides 'Accept In Principle' TWA Arbitration

BULLETIN
WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—Chairman Frank P. Douglass of the national mediation board said today that both sides "have accepted in principle" a governmental proposal for arbitration of the 14-day-old strike by Transcontinental & Western Air-line pilots.

By United Press
Negotiations resumed in the soft coal controversy today, while the government awaited a reply from the company on its proposal to settle the air line strike.

In a third major labor dispute, striking maritime unions on the west coast awaited the arrival of a federal conciliator to resume attempts at settlement of the prolonged shipping tie-up.

At West Allis, Wis., meanwhile, the CIO United Automobile Workers charged that Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Company was attempting to "provoke further violence," and reinforced picket lines at the company's strike-bound farm equipment plant.

At Denver, Colo., management of 100 large retail food stores sought to negotiate a plan with union representatives to save more than $100,000 worth of perishable food.

While negotiations in the coal dispute were resumed, there was little likelihood that the federal coal administration and John L. Lewis would get around to the question of wages until Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug returns to Washington.

Krug's tour of the west is scheduled to end at Los Angeles Wednesday. But even his return cannot open the way for wage increases for the 400,000 soft coal miners unless the government revises or abolishes its wage stabilization program.

In the air line strike, President Jack Frye of Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., said he would submit his answer tomorrow to the government's peace proposal. The government's plan to settle the 15-day strike by the airline's pilots calls for arbitration of the dispute with resumption of operations pending the outcome.

In the shipping strike, Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach sent federal conciliator Nathan Reinsinger to the west coast in an effort to persuade striking unions and the employers to end the month-old tie-up. The chief point at issue is the union demand for preferential hiring of ships' officers.

The striking CIO Marine Engineers said it had been promised by the labor department that provision of the agreement which settled the strike on the east and gulf coasts would be extended to the west coast. The U. S. maritime commission has authorized employers to put the agreement into effect. (Continued on Page Two)

CLAY PLANNING FULL REPORT ON GERMAN SETUP

BERLIN, Nov. 4—Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay said today that when he leaves for Washington Friday he will take "everything from the office cabinets to the kitchen sink" so he can give Secretary of State James F. Byrnes a full report on Germany.

Byrnes invited Clay and Ambassador Robert Murphy to Washington for conferences preliminary to tentative discussion of the German problem by the big four council of foreign ministers.

Clay said at a press conference that the foreign ministers were not expected to get beyond a program for future discussions when they approach the discussion of Germany later this month.

The deputy military governor reiterated that he had not been holding "secret" discussions with Marshal Vassily Sokolovsky of Russia on a plan for unifying Germany under four-power supervision.

Republicans Expect To Win In Ohio

BY TED S. ALEXANDER
United Press Staff Correspondent

COLUMBUS, Nov. 4—Ohio will hold its first post-war general election tomorrow with the definite possibility that the state will aid the Republican party in its effort to capture control of congress.

An estimated two million to two-and-a-half million voters will go to the polls between 6:30 a. m. and 6:30 p. m. to choose a U. S. senator, 23 congressmen, a governor, members of the state legislature and other state and county officials.

The state's Democratic and Republican parties' leaders have issued conflicting claims of victory tomorrow. In the nation, Republicans are forecasting a political turnover such as that in 1930 which paved the way for the new deal.

Political observers in the state have estimated that John W. Bricker, Republican candidate for U. S. senator, will defeat Democratic incumbent Sen. James Huffman by better than 300,000 votes.

Ohio has 17 Republican and 6 Democratic congressmen and the present Democratic administration is in a back-to-the-wall fight to maintain its present strength. Republicans hope to capture the present Democratic 3rd, 14th, 16th and 19th districts.

The 20th and 21st districts are in Cuyahoga county, the Democratic. (Continued on Page Two)

LABOR'S FATE MAY BE SETTLED

Industry And Labor Leaders Watch Voters' Reaction To Solons' Records

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—Labor and industry spokesmen feel that tomorrow's election will determine whether the 80th congress will amend the Wagner act—the nation's basic industrial relations law.

Many candidates for both houses are pledged to work for amendments which would give employers greater voice in collective bargaining elections among their employees and impose penalties upon unions for specified unfair labor practices.

Other proposed amendments would exclude supervisory workers and certain employees from protection of the law and require compulsory arbitration of some kinds of strikes such as those in public utilities.

Some of these ends were achieved in the Case bill passed by the last congress but vetoed by President Truman. Many congressmen who voted for this measure are already assured of reelection. Sen. Joseph H. Hall, R., Minn., a holdover, has announced his intention of seeking enactment of similar legislation in the new congress.

Wagner act amendments have been raised as an issue only in a few contests during the campaign but the matter has been of underlying concern to labor and industry. President Robert R. Watson of the National Association of Manufacturers and William Jackson, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, have urged enactment of labor laws which impose equal responsibility on unions and management.

Presidents William Green of the AFL and Philip Murray of the CIO have urged the election of congressmen opposed to any new union regulatory measures. Both have said that re-election of incumbents who voted for the Case, Hobbs anti-racketeering and Lea bills would mean an increasingly vigorous attempt to pass new labor legislation next year.

BIG 4 LEADERS MEET FOR 4TH TIME IN YEAR

Final Peace Treaties For German Satellites By Christmas Is Goal

SESSIONS ARE WATCHED

Meeting Will Prove Whether Or Not Big Nations Ready To Make Agreements

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—The big four council of foreign ministers meets today for the fourth time in 13 months with high hopes that before Christmas there will be agreement on final peace treaties for Hitler's satellites and preliminary understandings on the critical German problem.

The first New York meeting will start at 4 p. m., EST., in the 27th floor suite of the Waldorf Astoria hotel which has been reserved for the ministers' deliberations.

U. S. Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, Soviet foreign minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, and French Deputy Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville—flanked by advisors—will head the delegations. Their talks in coming weeks will determine whether the big four are now ready to bargain on their differences or whether the east-west split is to continue to prevent the writing of final peace treaties for Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland.

More important late this month the four, joined later probably by French President George A. L., will decide whether it is possible for them at an early date next year to begin work on a final treaty for Germany, and possibly Austria.

In view of past failures to come to understandings on crucial parts of the Hitler satellite treaties or to appear even close in their approach to the German problem, this meeting starts with more than the usual amount of pessimism.

What hope there is stems from 1. Recent Soviet statements indicating that the Soviet Union is now ready to begin "talking turkey" about Germany, and is in general agreement with some of Byrnes' proposals—economic unification, early provisional German government.

2. A slight—very slight—sign from Yugoslavia that she may not be unyielding about the critical issue of Trieste and the Italo-Yugoslav border issues as she was in Paris.

Ever since the foreign ministers of the four great allies started in September, 1945, to try to formalize the end of the war with Hitler's satellites, rival Italian and Yugoslav claims for Trieste have plagued them.

Even after compromising early this summer on internationalization of that northern Adriatic port, the big four failed at the Paris peace conference to agree on what kind of internationalization it would be. The western nations charged the eastern nations with seeking internationalization in name only—a scheme they said would be tantamount to turning it over to Yugoslavia. The eastern (Continued on Page Two)

OPA MOVES TO CAUSE HIGHER COTTON PRICES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—The OPA today paved the way for higher prices on cotton tufted bed-spreads, cotton table cloths, mattress pads, ready-made slip covers and other textile items.

Increases were made possible when OPA put those items on the list of textile products to which manufacturers may add increased labor and material costs. The move is designed to stimulate production.

Affected by today's action are covered mattress covers ironing board covers, printed cotton table cloths, cotton tufted bed-spreads, woven and quilted mattress pads, ironer pads and covers, ready-made slip covers, domestic laundry bags and hooded pillow covers.

The agriculture department reported meanwhile that world cotton production this year will be the second smallest since 1923-24, supporting its contention that cotton should be in a strong price position.

BIG 4 LEADERS MEET FOR 4TH TIME IN YEAR

nations accused the west of seeking to make it little less than an Anglo-American colony—a bridge-head against the east.

The Paris argument was so bitter and the "results" there so unsatisfactory that in protest Yugoslavia's delegation boycotted the last session of the Paris peace conference and sent a letter reiterating its determination never to sign the Italian treaty in the form now contemplated by the western nations.

Yugoslavia's Deputy Foreign Minister Ales Bebler took a little of the edge off that belligerent stand last night on the eve of the big four meeting at which both Yugoslavia and Italy will be given another chance to present their views. He said, in contrast to previous Yugoslav statements, that "for her part Yugoslavia... is willing to do whatever she can in order that an agreement between the allies (on the Italian peace treaty) be reached."

(In Belgrade, while Bebler was issuing his statement to the press, Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito told a cheering crowd that improvement of American-Yugoslav relations did not depend on Yugoslavia but on the United States. He cited American seizure of 200 of Yugoslavia's Danubian ships.)

Today's council of foreign ministers meeting will be devoted to procedural matters—deciding how they will tackle the multitude of recommendations for changes and additions to the satellite treaties made by the Paris peace conference.

Before the formal meeting, Byrnes is expected to confer informally—directly or indirectly—with each of the other council members. He said on arrival here from Washington last night that he wanted to talk to them and to confer with his American associates.

SEVEN COLUMBUS HUNTERS FINED IN COURT HERE

Seven Columbus hunters paid fines over the weekend in the court of Justice of the Peace Harold O. Eveland for violations of Ohio hunting regulations.

Edward Seymour was penalized $15 and costs for failure to wear hunting license on his back, and $15 and costs for unlawful possession of a rabbit. Seymour was arrested by Fish and Game Protector Clarence Francis.

Kenneth W. Morris was fined $15 and costs for using an automatic shotgun containing more than 3 shells while duck hunting. He was taken into custody by Protector Francis.

On a similar charge William J. Franz, who had been arrested by Protector Francis, was fined $15 and costs.

Tom Hubbard, accused of using a shotgun containing more than 3 shells, was fined $15 and costs. He had been taken into custody by Protector Francis.

Gilbert Seymour was penalized $15 and costs for failure to wear hunting license on his back, and $15 and costs for unlawful possession of a rabbit. Seymour had been arrested by Fish and Game Protector Chalmers Burns.

Arthur Mason, also arrested by Protector Burns, was fined $15 and costs for failure to wear hunting license on his back.

R. P. Ridgway, taken into custody by Protector Burns, was fined $15 and costs for failure to wear hunting license on his back.

EXPERTS WATCH VOTING ON THREE STATE BONUSES

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—Voters in three states tomorrow furnish a test of sentiment on a $30,000,000 issue likely to face the new congress—a bonus for World War II veterans.

Illinois, Michigan and Rhode Island, if the voters approve, will spend $675,000,000 on service bonuses ranging from $10 to $900.

Two big veterans organizations have asked congress to approve "adjusted service pay" up to $5,000 per man. Some estimates of the cost—set by the Veterans of Foreign Wars at $30,000,000,000—run as high as $40,000,000,000.

Other veterans' benefits are at stake in three other state elections Tuesday. And Texans, by a legislative error, will vote two days later on a $25,000,000 GI resettlement plan.

Others, however, have built up substantial gold reserves during the war or will be able to get credit from the world bank or other international lending agencies.

Transportation shortages also will hamper food distribution in 1947. In many countries, the repair and replacement of transportation facilities has not kept pace with deterioration and scrapping.

"This will limit the volume of food supplies which can be moved to ports for shipment as well as the movement of products from importing centers to points needing relief," the department said.

With the termination of UNRRA, many countries will have to cut down their food purchases or make them at the expense of industrial materials badly needed to repair their shattered economies.

ed detention camps for illegal refugees diverted from Palestine."

The increased immigration was believed to be a part of a plan by Hagana, Jewish underground organization, undertaken after an agreement between British colonial secretary Arthur Grech Jones and the Jewish agency for abatement of violence in Palestine.

Jewish agency circles in Jerusalem expected the release of Jewish leaders from the Latrun detention camp within 48 hours, but there was no official confirmation. It was understood the Jewish leaders would be released in connection with the Zionist inner council's recent denunciation of extremist violence.

Meanwhile reports from Tel-Aviv said a British soldier was injured last night when an unruly crowd, described by authorities as "riffraff", strung a wire across Allenby street just before he approached on a motorcycle. The soldier crashed into the wire and was injured slightly when the cycle turned over.

More than 10,000 Jews gathered in Habimah square in Tel Aviv last night for a demonstration against the deportation of the unauthorized immigrants to detention camps on Cyprus. Police took extensive precautions to prevent violence but there was no untoward incident during the meeting.

Latest reports on casualties in the battle of Hulleh swamps—the first major clash between the Jews and Arabs since the Arab uprising in 1939—set the deaths at five, three Arabs and two Jews. Scores of others were injured in the battle Saturday when Arabs sought to prevent the construction of a new Jewish settlement in northern Palestine.

G.O.P. will gain. Except for the extraordinary Democratic triumph in 1934—midway in Franklin D. Roosevelt's first term—majority parties uniformly have lost congressional seats in off year elections although not necessarily losing control of either house.

The political division of the present 79th congress which will expire Jan. 3, 1947 is as follows: Senate: Democrats 56, Republicans 39, Progressive 1.

House: Democrats 236, Republicans 192, Progressive 1, American Labor 1, vacant 5.

To obtain a bare majority of 49 senate seats, the Republicans must make a net gain of 10. To win a bare majority of 218 in the house, the G.O.P. must gain 26.

Maine held its 1946 election last September, returning three Republicans to the house, and electing a Republican governor and Republican senator. There remain 432 house seats to be voted on tomorrow. The 35 senate seats to be won or lost tomorrow are presently held by 24 Democrats, 10 Republicans and one Progressive. There is no Progressive candidate in this election, Sen. Robert M. La Follette, Prog., Wis., having been defeated this year when he sought renomination as a Republican.

Thirty-three governors will be elected tomorrow, the offices now being divided among 16 Democrats and 17 Republicans. The gubernatorial division among the 48 states is: Democrats 25, Republicans 23. There are in addition thousands of lesser state and local offices to be filled.

Tomorrow's election properly will be regarded as a political barometer for 1948 when the White House as well as congress will be at stake. It is traditional that a majority party which loses the house in a mid-term election loses the White House two years later. The house went Democratic in 1910 during a Republican administration and Woodrow Wilson, a democrat, was elected president two years later.

There are other touches of presidential politics in tomorrow's voting. The two men who headed the Republican ticket in 1944 again are seeking office. John W. Bricker, the 1944 vice presidential nominee is a shoo-in candidate for the senate from Ohio. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the G.O.P. presidential nominee two years ago, apparently is heading for a big personal political triumph tomorrow. Dewey is seeking re-election as governor of New York.

There is a Republican tradition that defeated presidential candidates are never renominated. The New York state Republican organization is out to put Dewey over tomorrow by a majority so large as to startle the country. The idea is that a smashing Dewey victory in New York state would do more than a little toward getting him renominated for president in 1948.

If the New York Daily News straw vote poll is as accurate as usual, Dewey's victory will be a record breaker. The poll was completed last night. It makes the almost incredible forecast that James M. Mead, the democratic candidate for governor, would carry only one county in the state. That one is the Bronx, one of the five counties comprising the city of New York. When Dewey was elected governor four years ago he lost New York City, polling only 38.7 per cent of the vote cast there. But the big Republican vote upstate was sufficient to put him in office. The News poll estimates Dewey will win 58.6 per cent of the New York City vote this time and 66.1 per cent of the state-wide ballots.

Another 1948 presidential possibility is Gov. Earl Warren, of California.

tie stronghold of Ohio, and not likely to swing to the Republican party.

The closest state race of great interest is the governorship for which Democratic incumbent Gov. Frank J. Lausche and Republican nominee Thomas J. Herbert have conducted a vitriolic campaign.

A 19-station radio broadcast will mark the end of the Republican campaign in Ohio tonight. Herbert will speak from Cleveland while Bricker and national GOP chairman B. Carroll Reece will talk from Columbus.

Governor Lausche, Senator Huffman and other Democratic candidates will end their party's campaign with a final round of speeches in Cleveland, where one-third of the state's vote is normally cast.

Lausche and Herbert, both from Cleveland, have announced they will vote early Tuesday morning in their home city. Lausche will return to Columbus to await the outcome of the election while Herbert will remain in Cleveland.

Predictions of a Republican victory came from GOP state chairman Fred H. Johnson. He forecast the "election of the entire Republican state ticket, as well as pronounced gains for the Republicans in congressional and county contests."

"Tom Herbert, for governor, and John Bricker, for United States senator, will win by wide margins. The result, from top to bottom, will be definitely and distinctly Republican. The new deal is done in Ohio," Johnson said.

Meanwhile, the Democratic state campaign director Clarence H. Knisley, said that "Governor Lausche will again carry his home county of Cuyahoga by a tremendous majority" and that his lead in "at least 24 other counties will put the Democrats on top."

"The million-dollar Republican campaign of reaction reached its peak two weeks before election day and the pendulum of political sentiment is swinging forward again—toward the Democrats," Knisley said.

SEES DEWEY WIN

The CIO United Automobile Workers charged that Allis-Chalmers had circulated a letter calling for a mass meeting of non-striking workers near the strike-bound farm equipment plant to form en masse to pierce the union's picket lines. The company denied that it circulated the letter, and charged the union with "despicable attacks" on defenseless workers.

In the Denver food strike, the retail food clerks union and the AFL meat cutters and butchers' union said they had presented employers with a settlement plan. Employers, however, said no progress had been made in negotiations, except that the unions had agreed to permit rendering companies to remove animal bones, fat and refuse from strike-bound stores.

Meanwhile, the disputes worked on a proposal to save perishable foods threatened with spoilage. Small retailers not affected by the strike continued to do a rushing business.

CHIANG OFFERS TO CALL CHINA ASSEMBLY NOV. 12

NANKING, Nov. 4—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, in what amounted to a face-saving gesture, today reportedly offered to convoke a national assembly Nov. 12 but to postpone business sessions until Communists and other minority parties were willing to participate.

If the report was true, it meant that the Communists had virtually forced Chiang to back down on a point on which the government heretofore was adamant—that the national assembly must go on as scheduled Nov. 12.

But convocation of the assembly only for the formalities of an opening left the way open for the Communists and the government to continue their peace talks until an acceptable settlement is reached. The Communists still were insistent that the government issue a cease-fire order as the first prerequisite to negotiations.

UNITED STATES AND CHINA SIGN TRADE TREATY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—The United States and China early today signed their first comprehensive trade treaty in more than 100 years, and U. S. officials emphasized that it was not made to bolster the nationalistic government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

The treaty was signed at Nanking yesterday (Nanking time). It is the first basic accord between the two nations since 1844, in the days of the Yankee Clipper.

It must be ratified by the U. S. senate and by the Chinese legislative yuan. When ratified, it will be in force for five years, and thereafter until one nation gives a year's notice of intent to terminate it.

State department officials called the treaty this government's first modern postwar trade pact. They pointed out that disputes arising under the agreement would be referred to the international court of justice for settlement.

swearing in of 36 senators chosen in the 1946 balloting. Either side could try for at least temporary advantage by challenging the seating of a member of the opposite party. Senate leaders doubt it would happen because the advantage would be merely temporary and subject to reversal any time the pendulum swung again.

The next test could come on the election of a president pro tempore. McKellar would have the edge. He is the dean of the senate, and seniority counts heavily. He could lay a claim, too, on the basis of the traditional resolution by which a president pro tem is selected.

OTTERBEIN WILL MARK 100 YEARS AT HOMECOMING

Ox Roast, Football Game, Homecoming Play On Saturday Program

"One Hundred Years at Otterbein College" will be the subject of the historical parade at Otterbein's Centennial Homecoming in Westerville next Saturday, November 9. Floats depicting scenes from the college's century of existence will be presented by twenty-five campus and town organizations in the spectacle. It will follow the ceremony at 9:30 A. M. honoring the queen, Miss Barbara Bone of Fredericktown. Attendees to the queen will be Alice Walter, Beach City; Lee Guernsey, Dayton, and Marilyn Steiner, Mt. Cory.

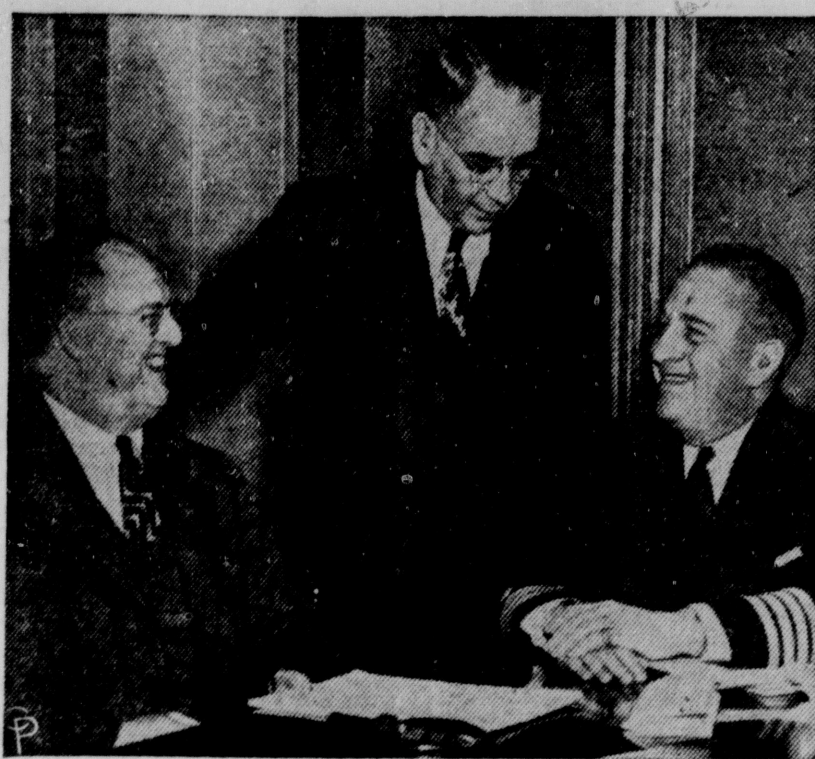

The football opponent for the day will be Albion College, Albion, Michigan, with the game scheduled for 2:15 on the Westerville high school field. Otterbein is enjoying a five game winning streak and is leading the Ohio conference. Only a 13-7 loss to West Virginia mars the Otters' record. Special guests at the game will be members of the "All-Otterbein" team chosen in 1901 after the first eleven years of the game at Otterbein.

An innovation which harkens back to the days of the founding of the school is the ox roast which will be held after the football game. The meat will be roasted in pits on the west campus under the direction of Prof. Lawrence Kunkle of Ohio State University, and will be served in the alumni gymnasium to approximately 2,000 students, alumni, and friends of the college.

An informal program will be held at the ox roast featuring the sale by auction of the football used in the Homecoming game, the proceeds of the sale to benefit the memorial stadium fund.

The day's events will close with the homecoming play, "Susan and

Soil Conservation Notes

By J. A. Muster

A shipment of fish to stock the pond on his Darby township farm has been received by Dewey Downs through the Pickaway Soil Conservation district. The conservation farm plan for the farm is to be completed this month. Several inquiries have come to the district office in Circleville regarding stocking of ponds with fish and the answer is, that the district can only obtain fish for farms planned or farms having applied for conservation farm plans.

The first terrace on the Sam D. Smith farm in Madison township is under construction on one field and as soon as the late wheat seeding is completed, Mr. Smith is to stake terraces on much of the remainder of his farm which consists largely of rolling land. A soil building rotation of crops including the use of sufficient lime and fertilizer is planned for both the terraced and level lands on the farm. Rotation pasture will be relied on mostly for grazing.

William J. Barthelmas, Wayne township farmer and J. A. Muster

are to be heard over Station WHKC at 7:15 Saturday morning Nov. 9th. The discussion will concern the conservation farm plans which Mr. Barthelmas has covering his farms near Circleville and Williamsport. "Conservation Conversation" programs will be heard over this station each Saturday morning at 7:15.

The third of the series of teacher-training schools was held at the Darby high school Oct. 27. William Goodwin, Soil Conservation Service forester from McArthur led the work. Two forests were visited; one which has been pastured and which shows no replacement trees and a second woods in which no grazing has been allowed for many years. The well managed woods has a second crop well advanced and with proper harvest judgement will keep the farm supplied with needed timber indefinitely. Following a fine dinner served in the

BRIDGET WATERS SATISFIED WITH JURY'S VERDICT

Involuntary Manslaughter Charge Returned Against Irish War Bride

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Nov. 4—Irish war bride Bridget Waters, satisfied with a jury verdict finding her guilty of involuntary manslaughter for the slaying of her estranged American husband, spent today playing with her 16-month-old son in the garden of her hotel.

"My only regret now," the green-eyed nurse said, "is that I have to leave my baby to serve a sentence at the state prison."

Released from Clark county jail on $5000 bail only 80 minutes after the jury returned its verdict yesterday, she said she was ready to serve any sentence imposed and added she would not appeal her case.

"I am quite satisfied with the decision of the jury," she said.

District Judge A. S. Henderson, who may fine her $100 or imprison her for 1 to 5 years, announced he would impose sentence at 3 p. m. Wednesday.

Members of the jury said they never considered finding the attractive 26-year-old Irish colleen guilty of first degree murder for the Sept. 2 killing of her husband, Frank Waters, Sr. She said she shot him because she feared he would harm their baby.

Mrs. Waters took the jury's verdict calmly in contrast to her frequent courtroom outbursts during the trial. She said she would return to England with her son, Frank Jr., as soon as permitted. The jury recommended that she be deported after her imprisonment—if she is confined.

She said she enjoyed sleeping in a soft hotel bed with her baby after two months in the Clark county jail where she was confined since the shooting.

"I'm not tired at all now that the strain is over," said Mrs. Waters, showing signs of jail pallor. "I've got my appetite back, too."

The bride, whose defense was financed by local gamblers and Irish townsfolk, said she would make no stage appearances or otherwise exploit the publicity she has received even if she is freed pending deportation.

"I think it will be best for the baby and I to return to England and re-make our lives there," she said.

Authorities said no plans for caring for Frank Jr. would be made until the judge's sentence is announced. The baby was kept at the county general hospital during his mother's confinement.

Mrs. Waters and her son played together at the El Cortez hotel gardens without attracting any special attention from natives or visitors. A private investigator who accompanied her from jail stood by. He said he would keep the "morbidly curious" from annoying her.

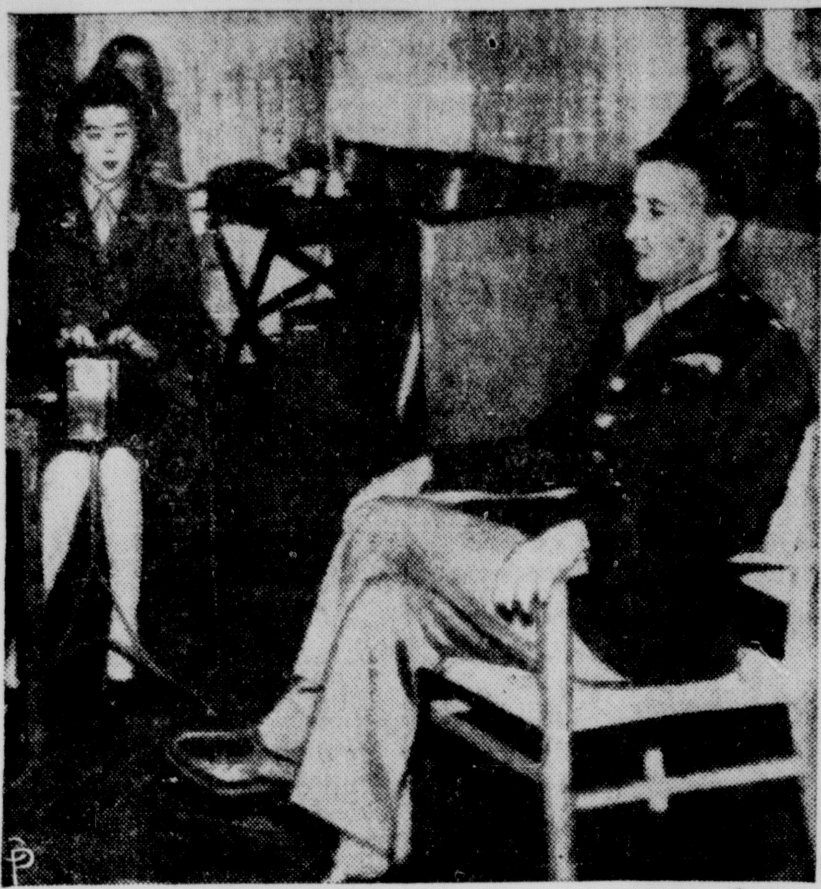

The jury, composed of eight men and four women, returned their verdict at 11:38 a. m. PST, yesterday. The case was given to them at 4:33 p. m. Saturday. Her trial opened Oct. 21.

UN Delegates Find Food Plentiful At Lake Success

By ROBERT RICHARDS

United Press Staff Correspondent
LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Nov. 4—We don't know what goes on in the minds of United Nations delegates, but we can tell you what's going into their stomachs.

They're up to their ears in pate de foie gras, and stand at least chin-high in potato salad. They eat herring soaked in sour cream, or herring plastered in wine. Others pass this up, and simply toss down the sardines and lobster.

The delegates' cafeteria presents at noon each day a smorgasbord to end all smorgasbords. The customers sometimes come away belching in Swedish. They plank down two dollars, and they can eat anything they want.

"And they want everything," said Mrs. Ann Corcoran, the hostess, from New Hyde Park, N. Y. "Most of them always come back twice."

The lobster salad is stacked three feet high. The cold slaw stands within inches of the ceiling. There are 21 different dishes for the delegates to choose from. There is cold sliced turkey, cold sliced roast beef, cornbeef with pickles, fresh ham with tomatoes, mixed vegetable salad, olives, celery, radishes, bologna, sliced tongue, chicken salad, blue or swiss cheese, pears, apples, and grapefruit.

"Then, of course, we always have at least one hot meat," said Chef Al Cavallo. "Today it is pot roast. Yesterday it was lobster newburg."

While seated at their tables, the delegates also may order cocktails, hot coffee, tea, or beer. "We keep them happy," Chef

Cavallo said. "Every day we make a switcheroo. We serve something different."

But some of the delegates manage to confuse Mrs. Corcoran.

"That Sir Alexander Cadogan, the British delegate, is a very fine gentleman," she said, "but do you know what he always goes for? No matter what we offer, he eats the bologna."

Paul Hasluck, the young Australian delegate, usually reaches for the corned willie.

The Chinese delegates go mildly wild at the sight of curried chicken, while the Russians find fresh ham a favorite.

"All the Europeans go for the herring, fruit, and cheese," Mrs. Corcoran said. "They just can't eat enough of it."

Some of the delegates, newly arrived from hungry Europe, can't believe their eyes when they step into the room and all this plenty confronts them. They blink, and almost turn as if to run. But if someone shoves a fork into their hands, they usually recover.

"Sometimes we use onions or garlic," Chef Cavallo said. "We spread it in the salads. But nobody gets mad about it."

"So what if they don't smell like a rose? They're all in the same condition."

GAVE WIFE MINK COATS; ENTERTAINED FOR WOMEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—William A. Nickel, confessed swindler who cheated his employer out of nearly a million dollars, bought his wife $40,000 worth of jewelry, plus two mink coats, then set himself up in a $10-a-day love nest where he entertained other women, police reported today.

The hideaway of the $100-a-week cashier of the Mergenthaler Linotype company was a hotel suite in midtown Manhattan where he entertained women lavishly, purchased scotch whiskey by the case and gave bellboys $20 tips, police said.

Evidence of Nickel's high living was uncovered by the district attorney's office yesterday following an intensive investigation of the $832,000 swindle.

FARM BUREAU MEMBERS WILL HEAR BISHOP

"Delegates and members of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation will hear one of the nation's outstanding religious and educational leaders when Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, will speak at the Federation's annual meeting Nov. 19-21." James R. Moore, director of information, announced today. Sessions of the conference will be held at the Neil House and at Memorial Hall in Columbus.

"Bishop of the New York area for the Methodist Church, Oxnam has been termed one of the clergy's most aggressive leaders," Moore said. "He is a crusader for a postwar world order built on Christian principles. In his 30 years since graduation from the University of Southern California, he has been pastor, college professor and president, lecturer, author and editor."

Teachers' meeting in Columbus Saturday.

Stanford Near, Muhlenberg township farmer, spent a painful hour Thursday when one of his hands was caught in a corn picker which he was operating alone during the noon hour. In endeavoring to release the power before his arm was drawn into the rollers, Mr. Near threw off the drive chain and suffered the loss of a finger when it was caught between the chain and cog wheel. He was unable to attract attention for some time, and it was necessary to dismantle part of the machinery to release the hand. He is receiving medical attention at Grant hospital.

FACE THE FACTS

Ohio Farmers, as well as those of the Nation as a whole, can face the future with the assurance of long-time price support legislation which is unprecedented in agricultural history.

This is the so-called Steagall amendment, adopted in 1941 and extended by later enactments. It requires that prices of most farm products be supported at 90 percent of parity or more until at least two years (after January 1) following the official end of the war - or - until at least January 1, 1949.

By a combination of loans, purchases and payments, the government is prepared to maintain this "floor" under the farmers return. While farm product prices generally are above the floor at present, the assurance is there that the general average price for each commodity will not be allowed to drop below specified levels.

Importance of this legislation is evident from the fact that after World War I farm product prices in the nation as a whole dropped 41 per cent in just one year, from 1920 to 1921.

Farmers: Look At The Record

In the field of agriculture the achievements of the Roosevelt and Truman administrations are outstanding.

- Farm income is seven times as great today as it was in 1932.
- Farm assets are 10 times as great as liabilities.
- Farm products are at an all-time high.
- Farm foreclosures last year were only one-twentieth of the number in 1932.
- Farm mortgage indebtedness has been reduced by almost one-half.
- Far-sighted soil conservation measures are increasing fertility.

Here are the average prices for some of the important farm commodities in Ohio in 1945, compared with prewar, the depression-low year, and the 1929 "boom"!

PICKETS AND BEDS

THIS troublesome year of 1946 may go down in history as the "Year of the Picket Line." To a casual observer in a surprising number of cities, the prevailing picture on the horizon has been labor union representatives displaying their signs and making public appeals for their cause.

Next to this outward manifestation, perhaps, has been the less obvious and even more effective display of labor power in the hotels. Even when guests could find shelter, they have sometimes had to submit to the hardship and inconvenience of making their own beds.

In the long run, though, this humiliation may serve a good purpose, as many a weary housewife and many a hotel employee will agree. There is no essential reason, in the nature of things, why men should not learn the art of bed-making and practise it accordingly, whether abroad or at home. If we know the women of this nation, the men will be learning it. Navy men, we believe, have a running start at this branch of education.

NECESSARY EXPORT

WITH American automobiles falling apart and new ones as scarce as beef-steak, some people wonder why six out of every 100 new cars made are shipped abroad. In Brazil there have been riots over export of agricultural products while citizens are caught between inflation and food shortages. England's labor party has had a hard time explaining shipment of its limited metal goods beyond the British Isles while home manufactures are stymied for lack of machine parts.

All this is evidence that most major countries are undertaking an export program. It's the old balance of trade idea at work again, after long disruption by the war.

Though it may seem difficult for home folks to do without what they need while it goes beyond their shores, this small beginning of future export is important. World trade, in this era of a foreshortened globe, is the life of domestic economy for practically every nation.

NO HARD FEELINGS

OHIO'S Republican gubernatorial candidate, Thomas Herbert, ran smack into the Democratic contender, the present Governor, Frank J. Lausche, in a hotel the other day. Said the Republican, "Hello Governor." Replied the governor, "Hello Tom", and both shook hands warmly. "I'll be taking you over in a couple of hours at that debate tonight," said the Republican. "Well anyway, if I don't win, I hope you get it", saluted the Democrat.

And that's a nice story. Too bad such things can't happen more often in the field of politics.

It's easier to pay war penalties than to repair the damage done.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—The disarmament topic came up fast, hot and big. Stalin prepared the way for it in his completely directed government radio and news advices and then his Molotov opened the subject in such a large manner at the UNA opening where he crowded such immediate vital questions as the election Tuesday back from the top headlines. The topic itself was rather plainly advanced to cover a change of diplomatic tactics from the Paris conference to this one. The Russians did not do very well at Paris or in the elections held recently in Berlin. They urgently needed a new line. The old bulldozing veto, threat and force tactics were not getting them anywhere excepting into a growing world unpopularity. So they loosened up a mite, or rather a shade of a mite, in letting UNA discuss vetoism and came forward with the rather belligerently presented demand of Mr. Molotov that we outlaw our atomic bomb and otherwise curb our arms. So the whole realm of disarmament prospects was injected for a diplomatic strategic purpose into UNA, and drew a counter plan from the United States which went the idea one better.

Now you may study these plans and encounter plans in detail for days but the only safe conclusion is that disarmament has become a topic—a topic especially among people who do not know much about armament or among authorities who know but are not saying much frankly.

The last time the United States disarmed was after World War I when we scrapped ships. Voluntarily we offered our keels and blueprints to the world and secured adoption of a 5-5-3 ratio among the big powers. We found out this did not prevent war. World War II was bigger and worse. Indeed our very disarmament treaties permitted Japan to build herself up to a war against us. So we must realize at the outset that disarmament does not necessarily mean peace; indeed such a treaty may be a vehicle of opportunity for war. In short, while our people may be thinking in old terms of disarmament and peace, their hopeful hearts are ruling their memories, and peace might just as readily eventuate from armament—good forceful armament which is too strong for anyone to attack.

Hopeful Americans may say the administration arms expenditures are running too high. They were $13.2 billions as last reported. I also think this is too high. Air corps leader General Spaatz has been writing magazine articles saying what you must have read in this spot much earlier, namely that the American frontier is now on the top of the world. One of our B-36s could carry 10,000 pounds of destructive agents (atom bombs) to Europe or Asia and return without refueling. He is speaking of modern armament even beyond the last war.

You can plainly see then that if armies and navies were cut finally by agreements now under discussion, peace might not eventuate. Then why not cut the air force, you may ask. Well, one of Stalin's government press announcements said he was not cutting his aviation or scientific wings any further—the two agencies of destruction most important to peace. You might better say, as the United States has peaceful intentions, why not keep our atomic bomb for use against anyone who would make war against us.

Washing Irritates Eczema

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
SOAP AND WATER are good skin cleansers, and ordinarily, nearly everybody prefers their use to that of any substitute, because of their invigorating effect.

Sometimes, however, in cases where there is a disorder of the skin, soap cannot be used because it may cause further irritation of an already irritated skin. For example, in eczema it is better not to cleanse the skin with soap.

Sulfated Oils

It has been suggested that what are known as sulfated oils are less irritating, since they are not as alkaline as soap, and alkalies may irritate the skin. These sulfated oils do not form a lather, but they do clean satisfactorily, because they take up the oils of the skin, and various types of dirt can then be easily wiped off. In fact, these sulfated oils can be used not only for cleansing, but also for removing ointments which have been put on the skin.

Eczema affecting the outer ear canal is similar to eczema of the skin. In the outer ear canal, there is not only the problem of cleansing the skin without causing irritation, but also of removing the ear wax or cerumen.

Dr. Robert P. Little of New

York suggests that a mixture of sulfated oil, liquid petrolatum and water may be used for general cleansing of the ear canal, especially when it is dry and scaly.

The mixture can be used equally well whether the skin is wet or dry. After it is applied to the dry skin it may be washed off with water.

Soften the Wax

In getting rid of wax in the ear canal, if it is hard it may be softened over a period of a few days by the use of drops of olive oil or glycerin but, even better, the sulfated oil may be employed. After the wax is softened, it can be removed by syringing the canal with warm water to which baking soda and the sulfated oil have been added.

Of course, when eczema of the external ear canal occurs, it is a good idea to consult an ear specialist concerning the most effective treatment to be employed. He will prescribe the proper ointments to be used to soothe the skin. Sometimes, X-ray treatments are also of value. However, no matter what treatment is employed, there will always be the problem of keeping the ear clean, and it would appear the sulfated oil mixture is quite useful for this purpose.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

AFTER A FEW minutes Kirby continued, "Chris should know how it was with Alan and me. . . I loved Alan. It all happened so fast. Alan stopped in one afternoon to see mother. You see, she didn't marry Raphael until a week after Alan and I were married. So it wasn't unusual for young men to drop in to see her. They're all attracted to her, young and old. They always remember her. Raphael remembered her for four years. Part of it is that Mona Lisa smile of hers. Anyway, I was home the day Alan came. The new one, the made-over one. From one semester to the next I made myself over and lost 20 pounds. You've never been ugly. You've never been a fat girl. You don't know. It polishes you. You weren't at the tender age of nine taken out of a life you were meant for and put in a school where you were the fat girl, the victim of their jokes and cruelties, the little snobs."

"Your mother didn't do that to you, did she, Kirby?"

"Oh, no, that was Andrew's work. The great Andrew, mother's second husband. He wanted to make a lady out of a little roughneck, but out of his sight, of course. It took me a long time before I could deal with those kids, before I got it through my head that they were as miserable as I, that we were all what nice people call the 'victims of broken homes.'"

"Not cooperative. Anti-social. That's what the people in school said about me. I didn't go back to school. I married Alan and we had two weeks, one week at the house, your house now, and another going out to the west coast and a few days there. That was all I never saw him again. I'll never see him again."

Kirby took a deep breath. "They looked alike, but Chris is a stronger person, more brilliant. Chris was my first love. I used to look at him through the keyhole when mother and Andrew had parties because they wouldn't have me around much. How I used to go back to school and draw Chris's face on the margin of my notebook in class. Oh, the time you spend dreaming of things that will never happen. . . Alan was such a good person, sweet. He made me feel needed, that there was something I could do to make another person happy, that I had something to give. I've always been the problem kid."

Lydia said, "And now I understand you much better, Kirby. There were still many questions she wanted to ask."

Kirby said, "I'm not going with mother and Raphael. I don't want my son brought up in a foreign country when his father died defending this one and . . . well, there are other reasons, too." She kissed the top of Alan's too head. "I want to be a good mother to him, the best. Isn't it funny that all the time I was with Alan I kept thinking, 'There's so little time for him to be happy. In two weeks it will be all over.' . . . I was wrong. It will never be over. Now I'm making our son happy and I'll go on doing that. I can't see Alan dead out there on that stool. I can't see that at all. I see him born again, the Alan there, starting all over again. He hasn't been taken away from me. He's been given back to me, as a little baby. I can't make many promises to him, but there's one I can make right now. He's always going to do the thing he was meant to do."

A door was opening. There were voices. There was time only for Lydia to say, "It's still your room at our house, Kirby. Yours and Alan's."

Kirby's mouth drew in again. "Thanks, but I'm not coming in." Then Theo, bringing beauty and poise and a subtle scent, was coming in followed by the nurse and Raphael. Lydia's mind dismissed the nurse after she saw that she was a kind, sensible looking person who beamed at once over the baby.

It was impossible not to see that Raphael was younger than Theo, he who walked with a callike grace that suggested how beautifully he must dance. Tall, slender, dark-haired, with olive skin tones, and a mouth charmingly crooked when he smiled, he seemed not to live here, but to be only a guest. He had also a nervous look as though a sudden noise would make him bolt.

He kissed Lydia's hand and said with only a slight accent, "So you are Christopher's Lydia. I have heard so much about you, so many flattering things. . . I want to add some more now that you've seen her." Kirby asked roughly. But she was smiling.

Raphael inclined his smooth dark head toward his stepdaughter and spoke to Lydia. "She is so how do you say—to the point?"

Theo's eyes moved between her husband and her daughter. "They are always teasing," she said.

When Alan began to cry, Kirby took him away and Theo and the nurse followed Raphael held a silver lighter to Lydia's cigarette and inquired about Chris. Presently Theo, who had removed her mink coat and black hat with half a veil and who was wearing a smart ly simple black frock, returned to the living room.

"I hope Kirby explained why we were late. Isn't our baby adorable?"

Lydia looked at her with a candid admiration not only for the beauty of the short silvery hair above the young face, but also for the serenity of her face. But as her eyes traveled downward they stopped at Theo's hands. For they were tense and taut, the blue veins protruding.

She, too, asked about Chris and they talked the pleasanties that women somehow manage to do. A less discerning than Lydia would have felt that she had a brilliant future he had. Theo said, "A brilliant future he had. HAD."

Raphael smiled his crookedly charming smile. "He'll be fine, darling. Christopher has everything, a beautiful wife, a cozy house in the country. . ."

Theo smiled. "And servants that have stayed on during the war. Of course, the real secret of their staying on is that Isaac is notoriously lazy and Frances won't accept a place unless he goes along. But they are good people."

Raphael smiled at Lydia. "You are not to worry. Worry is bad. I do not worry. I am like a geespy. The trouble with you Americans is that you plan your lives and all the flavor goes out of it. I weed do thees and that for the future, you say, but you forget today. Today I live in New York, but next year, next week? I do not know. I do not care. Do you, Theo?"

"Not in the least."

They were laughing when Kirby came in.

What is in this room? Lydia thought. What is it that I feel? Devotion between mother and daughter, a jolly friendship between Raphael and Kirby, and conflicts kept under lock and key and the unexplained past.

The magnet had drawn all of Kirby's warmth inside her again. She said nothing. The nurse had taken Alan away. Kirby's large hands were spread open. Quite empty.

DEFINITELY WORST LEAD

FROM AMONG a choice of evils for the opening lead against a suit contract—when the bidding has given no information about the declarer's side suits—the underlead of an ace is usually the worst. That is because there is such a likelihood that the declarer, or dummy has the king, with a singleton in one holding or the other, which would cause the shutting out of your ace. If you feel you must lead the suit, the ace is ordinarily the less risky opening.

South West North East
1 ♠ 2 ♥ 2 ♠ Pass

At several tables of a duplicate, the bidding was the same, and in all those cases West led a diamond, either the A or the 2. Where it was the small card, the K of course was. One able declarer then ruffed the diamond 6 in dummy, scored the spade A, then put West in with the K, having counted on West for all the high cards. That end-played West, assuring an extra trick. A club or heart return would have shut West out of any trick in its suit, and the diamond actually returned enabled South to avoid a heart loser by ruffing in dummy and discarding his heart 8.

In the other case of the diamond 2 lead, a habitual finesser lost to all three of West's kings, yet made his contract.

Where the diamond A was led, West repeated the suit to the K. The inept declarer who tried three finesses there was set, and the one who took his spade lead and then threw West in with the K barely made his contract by that device, instead of an extra trick.

Rogge's Justice Department Associates Cool Over Firing

Meat Industry Reported Set To Produce at Full Capacity

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Former mass sedition trial prosecutor, O. John Rogge, didn't get much sympathy from his justice department associates when he was fired for using material from a confidential report in a public speech.

There's a feeling that Rogge muffed the sedition case and thereby cast a shadow on the legal ability of the justice department's lawyers.

One attorney, who helped gather evidence for the original case—which was entirely rebuilt when Rogge took over—asserted privately that "We could have wound up the whole case in three weeks and gotten some convictions."

That lawyer took the view that Rogge departed from sound courtroom evidence and embarked on an ideological excursion over the world.

THE UNITED STATES meat industry is ready to bounce back into full production despite the serious slump in its operations during the immediate post-war period.

This was the conclusion drawn by a board representing the agriculture department of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

In a report labeled "Our Meat Supply," the Chamber maintained that "the experiences of the last few years have not permanently impaired the productive capacity or the efficiency of the meat industry."

"There still is a near-record number of cattle and a sufficient number of hogs on which to base such further expansion of production as the country may require," the Chamber added.

The report charged that during recent years "meat production

has been subjected to various regulatory measures of a complex and temporary character which have created confusion and uncertainty."

MANY GOVERNMENT OBSERVERS think OPA will be out of business before the end of the year. They say OPA is moving faster on decontrol than the speedup decreed by President Truman in his meat address.

Some 3,500 controls were removed up to Oct. 15 and OPA's huge war-time staff has been whittled to skeleton size.

Some experts believe the government will abandon all controls as quickly as possible and let private industry assume the responsibility—and the headache—of seeing to it that prices are kept in line.

MRS. CHARLES GRIDLEY, a secretary of Rep. Joseph W. Martin (R) of Massachusetts, is being kidded about her foresight in having two sets of Capitol offices cleaned during the congressional adjournment.

Her boss, as House minority leader, has offices hidden away in a hard-to-find corner of the Capitol building. Mrs. Gridley got tired of the dust-faded colors and ordered the walls washed for the first time in six years.

However, if the Republicans win control of the House, Martin will become speaker and move into the sumptuous quarters now occupied by Sam Rayburn (D) of Texas.

So, when Congress adjourned, Mrs. Gridley called Capitol Architect David Lynn and suggested that the speaker's offices be overhauled, too.

SENATE OFFICIALS feel certain now they have uncovered the last historical documents from the nooks and crannies of the Capitol building's remote, vaulted underground storerooms.

Commenting on the recent discovery of priceless documents relating to the never-fulfilled plans to burying President Washington beneath the Capitol, one veteran Senate official said:

"That's the last of them. I can vouch for that. We've gone through everything."

The Washington documents were turned over to the National Archives.

Miss Joan Judy Bride Of Orin W. Dreisbach

Ceremony Is Read In Cincinnati Church

On November 1, the wedding anniversary of her parents, Miss Joan Judy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mills Judy, Cincinnati, became the bride of Orin W. Dreisbach, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Dreisbach, Pickaway township. The Rev. Edward S. Moreland performed the candle light service in Walnut Hill Christian church, Cincinnati, at 8:30 p. m.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a white satin gown decorated with seed pearl embroidery which outlined the heart shaped neckline and edged the flaring peplum at the waistline. The veil, of rosepointe lace worn by Mrs. Mills at her own wedding, extended the full length of the train of her gown. In her arms she carried a bouquet of white orchids combined with fuchsia and white cyclamen blossoms.

Miss Ann Patton Biddle was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Mrs. West Shall Jr., Miss Nancy Lee Westerman, Miss Mary Ellen Sprott and Miss LaVerne Knose. Little Eleanor Kinney served as flower girl.

Layton Black Jr., Canal Winchester, served as best man for Mr. Dreisbach. Ushers for the wedding were Cooper Judy, brother of the bride, Franklin Crites, David Jackson, and Hildeburn Jones, Jr.

Preceding the ceremony Dr. C. Hugo Grimm, organ teacher of the bride at Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, played a half hour of organ music. Miss Mary Margaret Stoops, sorority sister of the bride, offered several vocal numbers including the Lord's Prayer.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Myers Y. Cooper, grandparents of the bride. Mrs. Judy, mother of the bride, wore a gold crepe dress with a high necked bodice trimmed with gold sequins in a diagonal motif. Pinned at her shoulder was a corsage of wine colored orchids.

Mrs. Dreisbach chose for her son's marriage a coral crepe gown trimmed with mother of pearl sequins. Her flowers were beige-hued orchids tipped in coral.

Among the guests at the reception were Dr. and Mrs. H. D. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. David Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Hildeburn Jones, Jr., Mrs. E. O. Crites, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Crites, and Roger May, Circleville; Miss Jeanne Forder, Columbus; Mrs. D. H. Dreisbach, Kingston; Miss Mary Martha Hammond, New Holland.

During the reception a group of sorority sisters of the bride serenaded her.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Dreisbach left for a wedding trip to California where they plan to visit with Mr. Dreisbach's sister and her family. For traveling the bride changed to an apple green suit trimmed with gray fur. She wore gray accessories.

The bride was educated at College Preparatory school and Southern Seminary, Buena Vista, Va. She studied organ at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music where she became a member of Phi Beta sorority.

Mr. Dreisbach attended Kentucky Military Institute and Ohio State University before he enlisted in the service. He served with the 82nd Airborne division in Europe.

Upon their return from the West the couple will make their home at Maple Lawn Farm, Pickaway township.

BROWNS, HAWKS ARE BEATEN IN FINAL SECONDS

The Cleveland Browns, first-place team in the All-America conference, and Miami, the tail-enders, had one thing in common today—a complaint that yesterday's games were a half-minute too long.

The New York Yankees defeated Miami, 24 to 21, on Ace Parker's touchdown pass with 26 seconds to go. The Los Angeles Dons nipped the Browns, 17 to 16, on Joe Aguirre's field goal with 20 seconds to play. The games, the only ones played Sunday, caused no change in standings, except that New York strengthened its grip on the eastern division lead. Cleveland still leads the West.

Miami, struggling hard to improve its dismal record, scored twice in the last period, on a plunge by Don Reese and a pass from Charley Price to Monk Gafford, and appeared to have a safe lead. But New York drove from its 12-yard line to the Seahawk goal in 11 plays, most of them passes by Parker, and scored on an 11-yard heave to Jack Russell.

Cleveland got off to a 16 to 7 first-half lead over the Dons, but Los Angeles came back to tally in the last period on a 30-yard drive after Tom Colella failed to get a fourth-down punt away, and then Aguirre's kick climaxed a late Los Angeles rally.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

Peace can never be static. Today it rests on the science and air fronts. To consider it seriously you would not, like Stalin, talk through newspapers, or like Molotov belligerently present it as a sort of diplomatic weapon at a conference.

You can see all these factors of peace plainly in your daily lives. A man does not disarm himself, or throw away his fire hose (as Mr. Roosevelt once put it), or even lend-lease it to a neighbor in hopes that the neighbor may do likewise. To consider such things you would have to be rather sure of your neighbors first. Would you not first insist on knowing for sure your neighbor's state of mind, whether his intentions were similar to yours?

World peace then hangs upon the state of the world, as much as upon armaments. Plainly no thinking man can be sufficiently glib to believe a state of mind has been established upon which disarmament can be built with any confidence. If Russia wants disarmament and peace it should first help establish the sound grounds for it, first contribute to a state of well being which has some authenticity and into which confidence may safely be placed. That would lead to real disarmament. To establish such grounds will be a long, careful and tedious business—a genuinely serious business, and not at all like the diplomatic discussion which the United Nations assembly has been strategically hearing.

Opinions expressed by the writer in this column are the views of the author and not necessarily those of the Circleville Herald.

Pickaway County Rural Youth Honor Guests At Barbecue

4-H AND FFA MEMBERS ARE GIVEN AWARDS

Hundreds Attend Party Held In Memorial Hall For Young Farmers

Barbecue and recognition program Saturday in Memorial hall was attended by several hundred 4-H and Future Farmers of America members, their parents and friends. County Agent Larry A. Best, who was in charge of the affair, Monday issued a statement on behalf of the committee thanking the donors who made the event possible.

The statement: "To our knowledge, no other county in the state has the fine support from individuals, business men and industries for 4-H and FFA work, as does Pickaway county. As leaders of these two worthy groups of young folk we wish to sincerely thank you for your expression of encouragement to them."

The statement bore the signatures of Agent Best, E. Genevieve Alley, home demonstration agent, and K. L. Holtrey, vocational agriculture teacher.

Awards and trophies were presented to a number of outstanding farm boys and girls.

The barbecue was arranged in recognition of achievements of the county's farm youth who had a big part in the successful 1946 County Fair. Those attending dined on prime beef from the grand champion steer which weighed 1,255 pounds and won in the County Fair competition. It was sold at auction Sept. 13 at the fair to a committee of Circleville business men for $815.75—or 65 cents a pound. The champion steer had been entered in the County Fair by Paul Marshall.

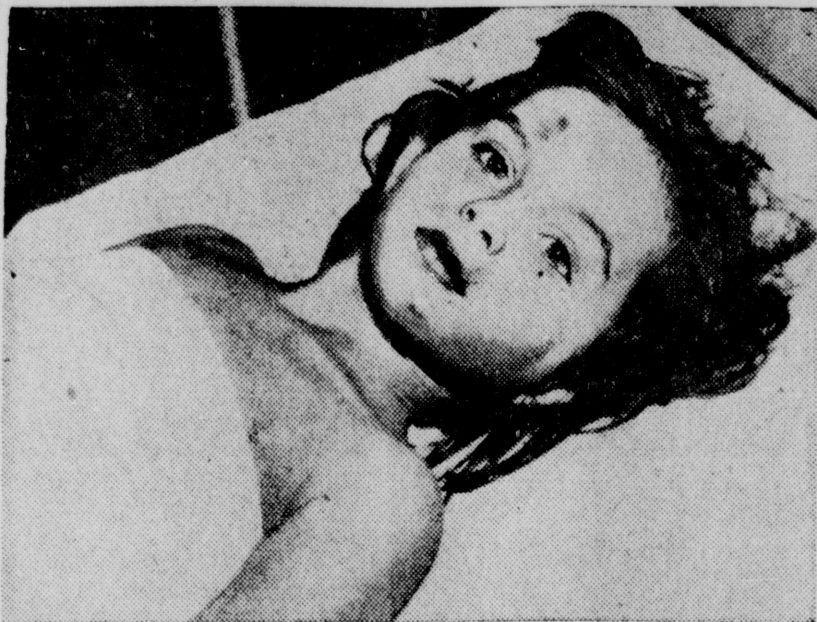

For two years J. W. Eshelman and Sons sponsored the annual 4-H and FFA recognition in the form of a barbecue but this year many other organizations and individuals helped to sponsor the event.

Dick Robinson was in charge of arrangements for the food and won praise from the committee for a good job. Preparation of the beef was supervised by Larry Kunkle, Ohio State University meat specialist.

Following is a list of the donors who cooperated in the affair:

First National Bank, Heffner Grain Company, Brehmer's Greenhouses, Second National Bank, Container Corporation of America, George VanCamp, T. D. VanCamp, Consolidated Telephone Company, Pickaway Grain Company, John

MOTORISTS WILL FIND SHORTAGE OF ANTI-FREEZE

As if the average motorist didn't have enough worries, automotive supply men of the Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, Columbus, throw in this prediction for cold weather drivers:

There will be a shortage of all types of anti-freeze.

The reason, they claim, is due this year to plant strikes and container shortages. The supply of permanent anti-freeze will be shorter than other types.

TENSION HIGH IN HOLY LAND; BRITISH HUNTING MORE JEWS

JERUSALEM, Nov. 4—British planes patrolled a 200-mile stretch of Palestine's shoreline today in a search for two shiploads of Jewish illegal immigrants reportedly approaching territorial waters.

Reliable sources said approximately 10,000 Jewish refugees were expected to attempt entrance into the Holy Land before the end of the year, despite Britain's immigration ban.

SIX ATTACKS ON WOMEN CHECKED

Columbus Area Police Kept Busy With Kidnapings, Criminal Attacks

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 4—Six women figured in abductions and criminal attacks in this area over the week-end, police said today.

Mrs. Morgan C. Penn, wife of an investment banker of suburban Bexley, told police that two young men, whom she described as young, slender, and between the ages of 20 and 25, pulled their car up beside hers and said her car was on fire.

One of the men slid into the seat beside her and the two cars drove off. Four miles distant the auto belonging to the men was wrecked and in the excitement Mrs. Penn got into the car of a motorist who had stopped to help. The abductors fled in Mrs. Penn's auto.

The two men then, according to state highway patrolmen, abducted a Springfield woman driving a 1935 with Illinois license plates near West Jefferson. A West Jefferson resident told patrolmen he saw both autos racing through the village with the woman screaming for help.

The Springfield woman was put out of her car in Springfield. Her car was wrecked west of Springfield, Mrs. Penn's car was wrecked near West Jefferson. The men were believed to have fled on foot.

Lewis Hay, 38, a farmer; William G. Hay, 36, his brother and a carpenter; and Henderson Prince, 19, an iron worker, all of Amelin, were arrested on a charge of abducting and attacking an 18-year-old Columbus girl.

She told police they called for her on the pretense that a friend of hers had arranged the date. She said she was criminally assaulted by two of the men and escaped through a field to a nearby farm house where she called police.

Another Columbus woman told police a man stuck a knife in her back as she stood on a street corner, took her to a vacant garage, criminally attacked her, and robbed her of $1.50.

Still another Columbus woman was struck on the head with a bottle by a man who attempted to attack her, according to police. She was robbed of $2.

Another local woman kicked a man who attempted to drag her into an alley, escaping unharmed, police said.

BILBO HEARING SLATED RIGHT AFTER ELECTION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—The senate was investigating committee will hold hearings right after the election, on charges that Mississippi war contractors built and furnished a "dream house" for Sen. Theodore C. Bilbo, D., Miss.

Bilbo's affairs are slated for scrutiny just as soon after tomorrow as enough senators can get here to hold the hearings, it was learned. The committee headed by Sen. Harley M. Kilgore, D., W. Va., is said to feel that the "dream house" and other charges should be examined before the new congress convenes in January.

According to assistant committee counsel Francis D. Flanagan, "statement and documentary evidence" gathered by the committee indicate friendly relations between Bilbo and three Mississippi war contractors.

GOP Gains Seen On Election Eve

DEMOS CLAIM THEY WILL KEEP HOUSE CONTROL

Republicans Contend They Will Win Majority In Senate And House

BY LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Nov. 4—Republican house and senate gains seemed inevitable today as the general election campaign for control of the 80th congress ended in a splatter of oratory.

For the first time since 1928 the Democratic party has campaigned without the spectacular leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt. His successor, President Truman, ducked the campaign altogether. Administration and Democratic candidates generally have been on the defensive.

Commodity and food shortages gave the Republicans a blistering issue which was aggravated by a scarcity of meat. Midway in the campaign Mr. Truman was compelled to abandon his hold-the-line price control program and the lid is off on most items. A cabinet crisis over foreign policy compelled the President to fire Henry A. Wallace, his secretary of commerce, who was the administration's most effective link with the left wing of the new deal-Democratic coalition.

Although congressional losses are inevitable, Democratic spokesmen claim they will hold the Republicans short of control of either house of congress. Republicans insist their gains will be sufficient to take the house of representatives by a comfortable margin and, perhaps, to win the senate.

Polls and surveys suggest that the house will go Republican this time and that the senate will be close either way. If so, this general election will end 16 lean political years for the Republican party. The G.O.P. lost the house after the 1930 election and lost the senate and the White House in 1932.

Democratic campaigners warned voters that loss of the house or senate would paralyze government. But few, if any, of them believe the administration can maintain its present congressional membership intact. The disputed question is how many seats the Democrats will win.

GBS ENDORSES HENRY WALLACE FOR PRESIDENT

LONDON, Nov. 4—George Bernard Shaw today endorsed Henry A. Wallace, former U. S. secretary of commerce, for president of the United States.

Shaw's "nomination" came in a brief message to the 60th anniversary meeting of the Fabian society, Britain's leftwing literary and professional organization. The Irish playwright was one of the founders of the group in 1884.

"The only message I have for the moment is that the Fabian society, having made Russia a great Fabian state, has now to make (Henry) Wallace succeed Franklin Roosevelt as president of the United States," Shaw's message said.

The conference is being held as a "court of inquiry" into the housing shortage. The inquiry is in the hands of seven World War II veterans who will report on their investigation of housing conditions in various regions.

During the conference, the Legion expects to reach a decision on whether it will support Wyatt's emergency housing program envisioning 2,700,000 homes for veterans before 1948. Wyatt also was expected to solicit the Legion's support for his prefabricated house program.

BETTING ODDS ON GOVERNOR'S CAMPAIGN EVEN

COLUMBUS, Nov. 4—Betting odds were reported even today in Ohio's gubernatorial race between incumbent Democrat Gov. Frank J. Lausche and his Republican opponent Thomas J. Herbert.

Odds of 8 to 5 favoring Herbert were reported as current on Friday. No reason was advanced for the leveling off.

Odds remained at better than 3 to 1 favoring former Gov. John W. Bricker, Republican, for election as U. S. senator over Sen. James W. Huffman.

Millions Will Continue To Live On Meager Diets

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—The agriculture department said today that the diets of millions of people throughout the world will be near meager this year as they were last winter and spring.

Nations dependent upon UNRRA for help will be particularly hard hit. The relief agency stops buying for Europe on Dec. 31, and for Asia about three months later. Relief then will go on a cash basis. The agriculture department said that although most countries will eat better than last year, there still may be an acute world shortage unless available supplies are stretched to the utmost.

World food production is up seven per cent, it said, but this increase will be cancelled out by a reduction in food reserves, the fact that much of the increased output is in inaccessible areas, and a seven per cent jump in world population since before the war.

"On a per capita basis," the department said, "food supplies for the current consumption year are about five per cent below prewar." "The demand for exportable food supplies promises to be nearly as great during the 1946-47 consumption year as it was in the past year while exportable supplies, in terms of calories, may be no larger."

As a result, many countries—particularly those needy nations which soon will lose UNRRA's help—must continue their spartan diets, rationing, and other food conservation measures to stretch their meager supplies.

The department said the amount of cereal grains available for export may be somewhat smaller because of the war.

cause the world dipped heavily into its reserves in warding off the threat of mass famine last spring. Rice supplies, which are vital to the hunger-ridden provinces of China and India, are likely to continue to be short.

SENATE LINEUP COULD BE TIE
No Rules On Books To Cover Procedure In Case Of Even Division

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—Tomorrow's election could plunge the senate party lineup into an unprecedented 48-48 tie and stalemate congress until leaders negotiate a truce.

If there is a tie, Democratic and Republican leaders probably would work out a compromise by the time the 80th congress convenes next January.

Any such agreement would be operating in a virgin field. There never has been an absolute tie in the senate. Nor are there any senate rules to cover the possibility. A senate tie at the start of the 80th congress would be complicated by the fact that:

1. There is no vice president to even preside during a fight for control.

2. There isn't even a president pro tempore until Sen. Kenneth D. McKellar, D., Tenn., is sworn in for the new term to which he is certain to be elected in tomorrow's balloting.

The rules provide that in the absence of a vice president and prior to selection of a president pro tempore the presiding officer shall be the secretary of the senate, Leslie L. Biffle.

The first chance for a fight for control, in event no compromise was negotiated, would come on the (Continued on Page Two)

MRS. ROGERS DIES
HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 4—Cowboy movie actor Roy Rogers today mourned the death of his pretty wife, Arline, 32, who gave birth to their third child, Roy, Jr., only a week ago. Mrs. Rogers was planning to get out of bed after breakfast yesterday morning when she talked to the singing cowboy on the telephone from Madison hospital. An hour later, Rogers was summoned by her doctor and was at her bedside when she died from a blood clot on the brain.

COAL CONFABS RESUME TODAY IN WASHINGTON

Government Says Both Sides 'Accept In Principle' TWA Arbitration

BULLETIN
WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—Chairman Frank P. Douglass of the national mediation board said today that both sides "have accepted in principle" a governmental proposal for arbitration of the 14-day-old strike by Transcontinental & Western Airline pilots.

By United Press
Negotiations resumed in the soft coal controversy today, while the government awaited a reply from the company on its proposal to settle the air line strike.

In a third major labor dispute, striking maritime unions on the west coast awaited the arrival of a federal conciliator to resume attempts at settlement of the prolonged shipping tie-up.

At West Allis, Wis., meanwhile, the CIO United Automobile Workers charged that Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Company was attempting to "provoke further violence," and reinforced picket lines at the company's strike-bound farm equipment plant.

At Denver, Colo., management of 100 large retail food stores sought to negotiate a plan with union representatives to save more than $100,000 worth of perishable food.

While negotiations in the coal dispute were resumed, there was little likelihood that the federal coal administration and John L. Lewis would get around to the question of wages until Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug returns to Washington.

Krug's tour of the west is scheduled to end at Los Angeles Wednesday. But even his return cannot open the way for wage increases for the 400,000 soft coal miners unless the government revises or abolishes its wage stabilization program.

In the air line strike, President Jack Frye of Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., said he would submit his answer tomorrow to the government's peace proposal. The government's plan to settle the 15-day strike by the airline's pilots calls for arbitration of the dispute with resumption of operations pending the outcome.

In the shipping strike, Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach sent federal conciliator Nathan Reinsinger to the west coast in an effort to persuade striking unions and the employers to end the month-old tie-up. The chief point at issue is the union demand for preferential hiring of ships' officers.

The striking CIO Marine Engineers said it had been promised by the labor department that provision of the agreement which settled the strike on the east and gulf coasts would be extended to the west coast. The U. S. maritime commission has authorized employers to put the agreement into effect.

CLAY PLANNING FULL REPORT ON GERMAN SETUP

BERLIN, Nov. 4—Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay said today that when he leaves for Washington Friday he will take "everything from the office cabinets to the kitchen sink" so he can give Secretary of State James F. Byrnes a full report on Germany.

Byrnes invited Clay and Ambassador Robert Murphy to Washington for conferences preliminary to tentative discussion of the German problem by the big four council of foreign ministers.

Clay said at a press conference that the foreign ministers were not expected to get beyond a program for future discussions when they approach the discussion of Germany later this month.

The deputy military governor reiterated that he had not been holding "secret" discussions with Marshal Vassily Sokolovsky of Russia on a plan for unifying Germany under four-power supervision.

Byrnes said today that when he leaves for Washington Friday he will take "everything from the office cabinets to the kitchen sink" so he can give Secretary of State James F. Byrnes a full report on Germany.

Republicans Expect To Win In Ohio

BY TED S. ALEXANDER
United Press Staff Correspondent
COLUMBUS, Nov. 4—Ohio will hold its first post-war general election tomorrow with the definite possibility that the state will add the Republican party in its effort to capture control of congress.

An estimated two million to two-and-a-half million voters will go to the polls between 6:30 a. m. and 6:30 p. m. to choose a U. S. senator, 23 congressmen, a governor, members of the state legislature and other state and county officials.

The state's Democratic and Republican parties' leaders have issued conflicting claims of victory tomorrow. In the nation, Republicans are forecasting a political turnover such as that in 1930 which paved the way for the new deal.

Political observers in the state have estimated that John W. Bricker, Republican candidate for U. S. senator, will defeat Democratic incumbent Sen. James Huffman by better than 300,000 votes.

Ohio has 17 Republican and 6 Democratic congressmen and the present Democratic administration is in a back-to-the-wall fight to maintain its present strength. Republicans hope to capture the present Democratic 3rd, 14th, 16th and 19th districts.

LABOR'S FATE MAY BE SETTLED

Industry And Labor Leaders Watch Voters' Reaction To Solons' Records

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—Labor and industry spokesmen feel that tomorrow's election will determine whether the 80th congress will amend the Wagner act—the nation's basic industrial relations law.

Many candidates for both houses are pledged to work for amendments which would give employers greater voice in collective bargaining elections among their employees and impose penalties upon unions for specified unfair labor practices.

Other proposed amendments would exclude supervisory workers and certain employees from protection of the law and require compulsory arbitration of some kinds of strikes such as those in public utilities.

Some of these ends were achieved in the Case bill passed by the last congress but vetoed by President Truman. Many congressmen who voted for this measure are already assured of reelection. Sen. Joseph H. Hall, R., Minn., a holdover, has announced his intention of seeking enactment of similar legislation in the new congress.

Wagner act amendments have been raised as an issue only in a few contests during the campaign but the matter has been of underlying concern to labor and industry. President Robert R. Watson of the National Association of Manufacturers and William Jackson, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, have urged enactment of labor laws which impose equal responsibility on unions and management.

Presidents William Green of the AFL and Philip Murray of the CIO have urged the election of congressmen opposed to any new union regulatory measures. Both have said that re-election of incumbents who voted for the Case, Hobbs anti-racketeering and Lea bills would mean an increasingly vigorous attempt to pass new labor legislation next year.

TRUSTEESHIP BATTLE OPENS

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Nov. 4—The battle of trusteeships opened in the United Nations today with South Africa making a bid for annexation of the mandated territory of southwest Africa which was almost certain to be opposed by Russia.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—The OPA today paved the way for higher prices on cotton tufted bedspreads, cotton table cloths, mattress pads, ready-made slip covers and other textile items.

Increases were made possible when OPA put those items on the list of textile products to which manufacturers may add increased labor and material costs. The move is designed to stimulate production.

Affected by today's action are covered mattress covers ironing board covers, printed cotton table cloths, cotton tufted bedspreads, woven and quilted mattress pads, ironer pads and covers, ready-made slip covers, domestic laundry bags and hooded pillow covers.

The agriculture department reported meanwhile that world cotton production this year will be the second smallest since 1923-24, supporting its contention that cotton should be in a strong price position.

BIG 4 LEADERS MEET FOR 4TH TIME IN YEAR

Final Peace Treaties For German Satellites By Christmas Is Goal

SESSIONS ARE WATCHED

Meeting Will Prove Whether Or Not Big Nations Ready To Make Agreements

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—The big four council of foreign ministers meets today for the fourth time in 13 months with high hopes that before Christmas there will be agreement on final peace treaties for Hitler's satellites and preliminary understandings on the critical German problem.

The first New York meeting will start at 4 p. m., EST., in the 27th floor suite of the Waldorf Astoria hotel which has been reserved for the ministers' deliberations.

U. S. Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, Soviet foreign minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, and French Deputy Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville—flanked by advisors—will head the delegations. Their talks in coming weeks will determine whether the big four are now ready to bargain on their differences or whether the east versus west split is to continue to prevent the writing of final peace treaties for Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland.

More important late this month the four, joined later probably by French President George Pompidou, will decide whether it is possible for them at an early date next year to begin work on a final treaty for Germany, and possibly Austria.

In view of past failures to come to understandings on crucial parts of the Hitler satellite treaties or to appear even close in their approach to the German problem, this meeting starts with more than the usual amount of pessimism.

What hope there is stems from: 1. Recent Soviet statements indicating that the Soviet Union is now ready to begin "talking turkey" about Germany, and is in general agreement with some of Byrnes' proposals—economic unification, early provisional German government.

2. A slight—very slight—sign from Yugoslavia that she may be unyielding about the critical issue of Trieste and the Italo-Yugoslav border issues as she was in Paris.

Ever since the foreign ministers of the four great allies started in September, 1945, to try to formalize the end of the war with Hitler's satellites, rival Italian and Yugoslav claims for Trieste have plagued them.

Even after compromising early this summer on internationalization of that northern Adriatic port, the big four failed at the Paris peace conference to agree on what kind of internationalization it would be. The western nations charged the eastern nations with seeking internationalization in name only—a scheme they said would be tantamount to turning it over to Yugoslavia. nations accused the west of seeking to make it little less than an Anglo-American colony—a bridge-head against the east.

The Paris argument was so bitter and the "results" there so unsatisfactory that in protest Yugoslavia's delegation boycotted the last session of the Paris peace conference and sent a letter reiterating its determination never to sign the Italian treaty in the form now contemplated by the western nations.

Yugoslavia's Deputy Foreign Minister Aleks Bebler took a little of the edge off that belligerent stand last night on the eve of the big fourth meeting at which both Yugoslavia and Italy will be given another chance to present their views. He said, in contrast to previous Yugoslav statements, that "for her part Yugoslavia... is willing to do whatever she can in order that an agreement between the allies (on the Italian peace treaty) be reached."

(In Belgrade, while Bebler was issuing his statement to the press, Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito told a cheering crowd that improvement of American-Yugoslav relations did not depend on Yugoslavia but on the United States. He cited American seizure of 200 of Yugoslavia's Danubian ships.)

Today's council of foreign ministers meeting will be devoted to procedural matters—deciding how they will tackle the multitude of recommendations for changes and additions to the satellite treaties made by the Paris peace conference.

Before the formal meeting, Byrnes is expected to confer informally—directly or indirectly—with each of the other council members. He said on arrival here from Washington last night that he wanted to talk to them and to confer with his American associates.

Others, however, have built up substantial gold reserves during the war or will be able to get credit from the world bank or other international lending agencies.

Transportation shortages also will hamper food distribution in 1947. In many countries, the repair and replacement of transportation facilities has not kept pace with deterioration and scrapping.

"This will limit the volume of food supplies which can be moved to ports for shipment as well as the movement of products from importing centers to points needing relief," the department said.

TWO WIVES ASK DIVORCES IN SUITS FILED HERE

Mrs. Nora G. Harrington filed suit for divorce in Pickaway County Common Pleas court, Monday, accusing Lewis J. Harrington, 240 East Franklin street, of gross neglect of duty.

Declaring they were married June 4, 1940 at Greenup, Ky., and that they are childless, Mrs. Harrington claims her husband failed to provide properly for her and that she was compelled to seek employment. She also asks to be restored to her former name, Nora G. Hoffman.

In another divorce suit, filed Monday, Mrs. Mary Lou Grable charges Benny Grable, Route 2, Ashville, with gross neglect of duty. She also asks for alimony and the custody of their son, Benny, Jr. Mrs. Grable, a minor whose petition was filed for her by her mother, Mrs. Goldie Amann, says the marriage occurred Jan. 12, 1946 at Ashville. She alleges her husband failed to provide properly for her and that she was compelled to return to the home of her parents. She also says Grable has a "mean" disposition and that he has not worked for two months.

The increased immigration was believed to be a part of a plan by Hagana, Jewish underground organization, undertaken after an agreement between British colonial secretary Arthur Grech Jones and the Jewish agency for abatement of violence in Palestine.

Jewish agency circles in Jerusalem expected the release of Jewish leaders from the Latrun detention camp within 48 hours, but there was no official confirmation. It was understood the Jewish leaders would be released in connection with the Zionist inner council's recent denunciation of extremist violence.

Meanwhile reports from Tel-Aviv said a British soldier was injured last night when an unruly crowd, described by authorities as "riffraff", strung a wire across Allenby street just before he approached on a motorcycle. The soldier crashed into the wire and was injured slightly when the cycle turned over.

More than 10,000 Jews gathered in Hahimah square in Tel Aviv last night for a demonstration against the deportation of the unauthorized immigrants to detention camps on Cyprus. Police took extensive precautions to prevent violence but there was no untoward incident during the meeting.

Latest reports on casualties in the battle of Huleh swamps—the first major clash between the Jews and Arabs since the Arab uprising in 1939—set the deaths at five, three Arabs and two Jews. Scores of others were injured in the battle Saturday when Arabs sought to prevent the construction of a new Jewish settlement in northern Palestine.

G.O.P. will gain. Except for the extraordinary Democratic triumph in 1934—midway in Franklin D. Roosevelt's first term—majority parties uniformly have lost congressional seats in off year elections although not necessarily losing control of either house.

The political division of the present 79th congress which will expire Jan. 3, 1947 is as follows:

Senate: Democrats 56, Republicans 39, Progressive 1.

House: Democrats 236, Republicans 192, Progressive 1, American Labor 1, vacant 5.

To obtain a bare majority of 49 senate seats, the Republicans must make a net gain of 10. To win a bare majority of 218 in the house, the G.O.P. must gain 26.

Maine held its 1946 election last September, returning three Republicans to the house, and electing a Republican governor and Republican senator. There remain 432 house seats to be voted on tomorrow. The 35 senate seats to be won or lost tomorrow are presently held by 24 Democrats, 10 Republicans and one Progressive. There is no Progressive candidate in this election. Sen. Robert M. La Follette, Prog., Wis., having been defeated this year when he sought renomination as a Republican.

Thirty-three governors will be elected tomorrow, the offices now being divided among 16 Democrats and 17 Republicans. The gubernatorial division among the 48 states is: Democrats 25, Republicans 23. There are in addition thousands of lesser state and local offices to be filled.

Tomorrow's election properly will be regarded as a political barometer for 1948 when the White House as well as congress will be at stake. It is traditional that a majority party which loses the house in a mid-term election loses the White House two years later. The house went Democratic in 1910 during a Republican administration and Woodrow Wilson, a democrat, was elected president two years later.

There are other touches of presidential politics in tomorrow's voting. The two men who headed the Republican ticket in 1944 again are seeking office. John W. Bricker, the 1944 vice presidential nominee is a shoo-in candidate for the senate from Ohio. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the G.O.P. presidential nominee two years ago, apparently is heading for a big personal political triumph tomorrow. Dewey is seeking re-election as governor of New York.

There is a Republican tradition that defeated presidential candidates are never renominated. The New York state Republican organization is out to put Dewey over tomorrow by a majority so large as to stifle the country. The idea is that a smashing Dewey victory in New York state would do more than a little toward getting him nominated for president in 1948.

If the New York Daily News straw vote poll is as accurate as usual, Dewey's victory will be a record breaker. The poll was completed last night. It makes the almost incredible forecast that James M. Mead, the democratic candidate for governor, would carry only one county in the state. That one is the Bronx, one of the five counties comprising the city of New York. When Dewey was elected governor four years ago he lost New York City, polling only 38.7 per cent of the vote cast there. But the big Republican vote upstate was sufficient to put him in office. The News poll estimates Dewey will win 58.6 per cent of the New York City vote this time and 66.1 per cent of the state-wide ballots.

Another 1948 presidential possibility is Gov. Earl Warren, of California. Warren caught the eye of Republicans all over the country this year by winning both the Democratic and Republican nominations for governor. He has no opposition. Former Gov. Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota, is not a candidate for office nor is Sen. Robert A. Taft, R., O., whose senate term has not expired. Both figure in the 1948 Republican presidential picture.

tic stronghold of Ohio, and not likely to swing to the Republican party.

The closest state race of great interest is the governorship for which Democratic incumbent Gov. Frank J. Lausche and Republican nominee Thomas J. Herbert have conducted a vitriolic campaign.

A 19-station radio broadcast will mark the end of the Republican campaign in Ohio tonight. Herbert will speak from Cleveland while Bricker and national GOP chairman B. Carroll Reece will talk from Columbus.

Governor Lausche, Senator Huffman and other Democratic candidates will end their party's campaign with a final round of speeches in Cleveland, where one-sixth of the state's vote is normally cast.

Lausche and Herbert, both from Cleveland, have announced they will vote early Tuesday morning in their home city. Lausche will return to Columbus to await the outcome of the election while Herbert will remain in Cleveland.

Predictions of a Republican victory came from GOP state chairman Fred H. Johnson. He forecast the "election of the entire Republican state ticket, as well as pronounced gains for the Republicans in congressional and county contests."

"Tom Herbert, for governor, and John Bricker, for United States senator, will win by wide margins. The result, from top to bottom, will be definitely and distinctly Republican. The new deal is done in Ohio," Johnson said.

Meanwhile, the Democratic state campaign director Clarence H. Knisley, said that "Governor Lausche will again carry his home county of Cuyahoga by a tremendous majority" and that his lead in "at least 24 other counties will put the Democrats on top."

"The million-dollar Republican campaign of reaction reached its peak two weeks before election day and the pendulum of political sentiment is swinging forward again—toward the Democrats," Knisley said.

The CIO United Automobile Workers charged that Allis-Chalmers had circulated a letter calling for a mass meeting of non-striking workers near the strike-bound farm equipment plant to form en masse to pierce the union's picket lines. The company denied that it circulated the letter, and charged the union with "despicable attacks" on defenseless workers.

In the Denver food strike, the retail food clerks union and the AFL meat cutters and butchers' union said they had presented employers with a settlement plan. Employers, however, said no progress had been made in negotiations, except that the unions had agreed to permit rendering companies to remove animal bones, fat and refuse from strike-bound stores.

Meanwhile, the disputes worked on a proposal to save perishable foods threatened with spoilage. Small retailers not affected by the strike continued to do a rushing business.

CHIANG OFFERS TO CALL CHINA ASSEMBLY NOV. 12

NANKING, Nov. 4.—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, in what amounted to a face-saving gesture, today reportedly offered to convene a national assembly Nov. 12 but to postpone business sessions until Communists and other minority parties were willing to participate.

If the report was true, it meant that the Communists had virtually forced Chiang to back down on a point on which the government heretofore was adamant—that the national assembly must go on as scheduled Nov. 12.

But convocation of the assembly only for the formalities of an opening left the way open for the Communists and the government to continue their peace talks until an acceptable settlement is reached. The Communists still were insistent that the government issue a cease-fire order as the first prerequisite to negotiations.

Either side could try for at least temporary advantage by challenging the seating of a member of the opposite party. Senate leaders doubt it would happen because the advantage would be merely temporary and subject to reversal any time the pendulum swung again.

The next test could come on the election of a president pro tempore. McKellar would have the edge. He is the dean of the senate, and seniority counts heavily. He could lay a claim, too, on the basis of the traditional resolution by which a president pro tem is selected.

UNITED STATES AND CHINA SIGN TRADE TREATY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—The United States and China early today signed their first comprehensive trade treaty in more than 100 years, and U. S. officials emphasized that it was not made to bolster the nationalist government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

The treaty was signed at Nanking yesterday (Nanking time). It is the first basic accord between the two nations since 1844, in the days of the Yankee Clipper.

It must be ratified by the U. S. senate and by the Chinese legislative yuan. When ratified, it will be in force for five years, and thereafter until one nation gives a year's notice of intent to terminate it.

State department officials called the treaty this government's first modern postwar trade pact. They pointed out that disputes arising under the agreement would be referred to the international court of justice for settlement.

OTTERBEIN WILL MARK 100 YEARS AT HOMECOMING

Ox Roast, Football Game, Homecoming Play On Saturday Program

"One Hundred Years at Otterbein College" will be the subject of the historical parade at Otterbein's Centennial Homecoming in Westerville next Saturday, November 9. Floats depicting scenes from the college's century of existence will be presented by twenty-five campus and town organizations in the spectacle. It will follow the ceremony at 9:30 A. M. honoring the queen, Miss Barbara Bone of Fredericktown. Attendees to the queen will be Alice Walter, Beach City; Lee Guernsey, Dayton, and Marilyn Steiner, Mt. Cory.

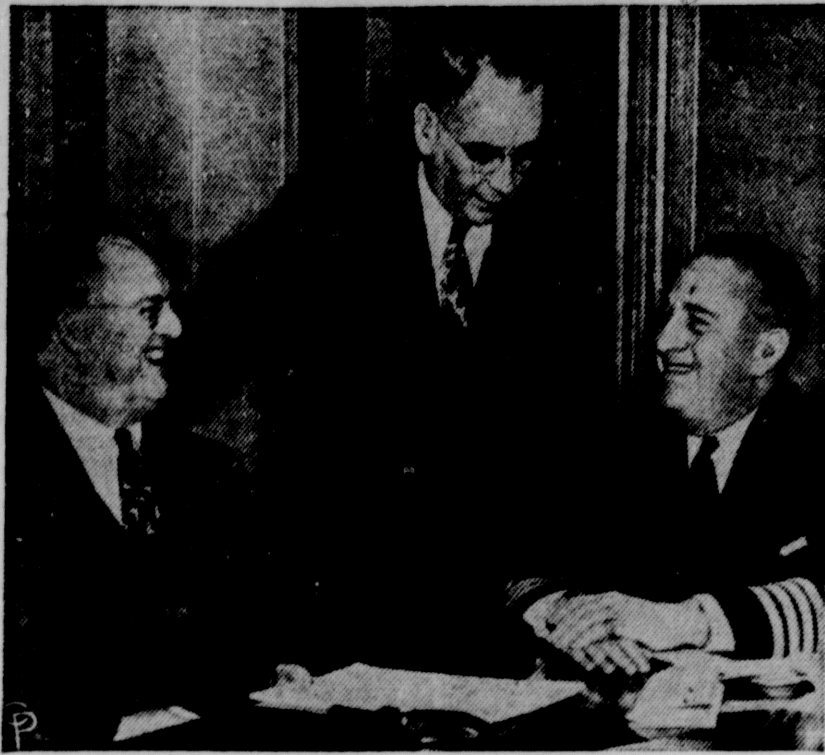

The football opponent for the day will be Albion College, Albion, Michigan, with the game scheduled for 2:15 on the Westerville high school field. Otterbein is enjoying a five game winning streak and is leading the Ohio conference. Only a 13-7 loss to West Virginia mars the Otters' record. Special guests at the game will be members of the "All-Otterbein" team chosen in 1901 after the first eleven years of the game at Otterbein.

An innovation which harkens back to the days of the founding of the school is the ox roast which will be held after the football game. The meat will be roasted in pits on the west campus under the direction of Prof. Lawrence Kunkle of Ohio State University, and will be served in the alumni gymnasium to approximately 2,000 students, alumni, and friends of the college.

An informal program will be held at the ox roast featuring the sale by auction of the football used in the Homecoming game, the proceeds of the sale to benefit the memorial stadium fund.

The day's events will close with the homecoming play, "Susan and

Soil Conservation Notes

By J. A. Muster

A shipment of fish to stock the pond on his Darby township farm has been received by Dewey Downs through the Pickaway Soil Conservation district. The conservation farm plan for the farm is to be completed this month. Several inquiries have come to the district office in Circleville regarding stocking of ponds with fish and the answer is, that the district can only obtain fish for farms planned or farms having applied for conservation farm plans.

The first terrace on the Sam D. Smith farm in Madison township is under construction on one field and as soon as the late wheat seeding is completed, Mr. Smith is to stake terraces on much of the remainder of his farm which consists largely of rolling land. A soil building rotation of crops including the use of sufficient lime and fertilizer is planned for both the terraced and level lands on the farm. Rotation pasture will be relied on mostly for grazing.

William J. Barthelmas, Wayne township farmer and J. A. Muster

are to be heard over Station WHKC at 7:15 Saturday morning Nov. 9th. The discussion will concern the conservation farm plans which Mr. Barthelmas has covering his farms near Circleville and Williamsport. "Conservation Conversation" programs will be heard over this station each Saturday morning at 7:15.

The third of the series of teacher-training schools was held at the Darby high school Oct. 27. William Goodwin, Soil Conservation Service forester from McArthur led the work. Two forests were visited; one which has been pastured and which shows no replacement trees and a second woods in which no grazing has been allowed for many years. The well managed woods has a second crop well advanced and with proper harvest judgement will keep the farm supplied with needed timber indefinitely. Following a fine dinner served in the

Involuntary Manslaughter Charge Returned Against Irish War Bride

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Nov. 4—Irish war bride Bridget Waters, satisfied with a jury verdict finding her guilty of involuntary manslaughter for the slaying of her estranged American husband, spent today playing with her 16-month-old son in the garden of her hotel.

"My only regret now," the green-eyed nurse said, "is that I have to leave my baby to serve a sentence at the state prison."

Released from Clark county jail on $5000 bail only 80 minutes after the jury returned its verdict yesterday, she said she was ready to serve any sentence imposed and added she would not appeal her case.

"I am quite satisfied with the decision of the jury," she said.

District Judge A. S. Henderson, who may fine her $100 or imprison her for 1 to 5 years, announced he would impose sentence at 3 p. m. Wednesday.

Members of the jury said they never considered finding the attractive 26-year-old Irish colleen guilty of first degree murder for the Sept. 2 killing of her husband, Frank Waters, Sr. She said she shot him because she feared he would harm their baby.

Mrs. Waters took the jury's verdict calmly in contrast to her frequent courtroom outbursts during the trial. She said she would return to England with her son, Frank Jr., as soon as permitted. The jury recommended that she be deported after her imprisonment—if she is confined.

She said she enjoyed sleeping in a soft hotel bed with her baby after two months in the Clark county jail where she was confined since the shooting.

"I'm not tired at all now that the strain is over," said Mrs. Waters, showing signs of jail pallor. "I've got my appetite back, too."

The bride, whose defense was financed by local gamblers and Irish townsmen, said she would make no stage appearances or otherwise exploit the publicity she has received even if she is freed pending deportation.

"I think it will be best for the baby and I to return to England and re-make our lives there," she said.

Authorities said no plans for caring for Frank Jr. would be made until the judge's sentence is announced. The baby was kept at the county general hospital during his mother's confinement.

Mrs. Waters and her son played together at the El Cortez hotel gardens without attracting any special attention from natives or visitors. A private investigator who accompanied her from jail stood by. He said he would keep the "morbidly curious" from annoying her.

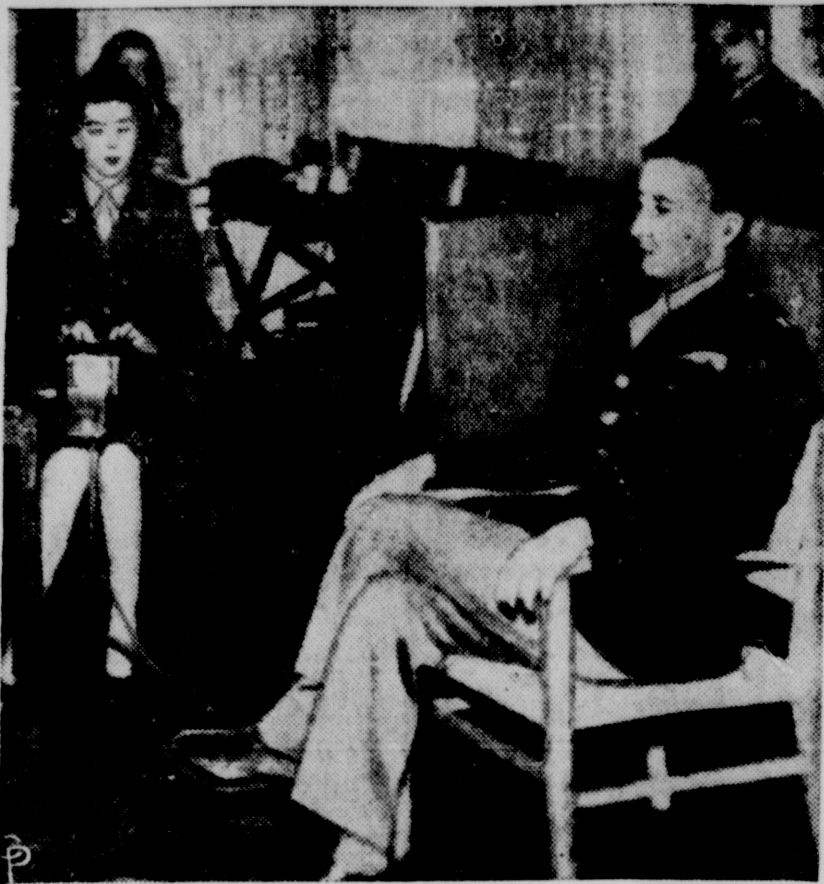

The jury, composed of eight men and four women, returned their verdict at 11:38 a. m. PST. yesterday. The case was given to them at 4:33 p. m. Saturday. Her trial opened Oct. 21.

UN Delegates Find Food Plentiful At Lake Success

By ROBERT RICHARDS

United Press Staff Correspondent

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Nov. 4

—We don't know what goes on in the minds of United Nations delegates, but we can tell you what's going into their stomachs.

They're up to their ears in pate de foie gras, and stand at least chin-high in potato salad.

They eat herring soaked in sour cream, or herring plastered in wine. Others pass this up, and simply toss down the sardines and lobster.

The delegates' cafeteria presents at noon each day a smorgasbord to end all smorgasbords. The customers sometimes come away belching in Swedish. They plank down two dollars, and they can eat anything they want.

"And they want everything," said Mrs. Ann Corcoran, the hostess, from New Hyde Park, N. Y. "Most of them always come back twice."

The lobster salad is stacked three feet high. The cold slaw stands within inches of the ceiling. There are 21 different dishes for the delegates to choose from.

There is cold sliced turkey, cold sliced roast beef, cornbeef with pickles, fresh ham with tomatoes, mixed vegetable salad, olives, celery, radishes, bologna, sliced tongue, chicken salad, blue or Swiss cheese, pears, apples, and grapefruit.

"Then, of course, we always have at least one hot meat," said Chef Al Cavallo. "Today it is pot roast. Yesterday it was lobster newburg."

While seated at their tables, the delegates also may order cocktails, hot coffee, tea, or beer.

"We keep them happy," Chef

Cavallo said. "Every day we make a switcheroo. We serve something different."

But some of the delegates manage to confuse Mrs. Corcoran. "That Sir Alexander Cadogan, the British delegate, is a very fine gentleman," she said, "but do you know what he always goes for? No matter what we offer, he eats the bologna."

Paul Hasluck, the young Australian delegate, usually reaches for the corned willie.

The Chinese delegates go mildly wild at the sight of curried chicken, while the Russians find fresh ham a favorite.

"All the Europeans go for the herring, fruit, and cheese," Mrs. Corcoran said. "They just can't eat enough of it."

Some of the delegates, newly arrived from hungry Europe, can't believe their eyes when they step into the room and all this plenty confronts them. They blink, and almost turn as if to run. But if someone shoves a fork into their hands, they usually recover.

"Sometimes we use onions or garlic," Chef Cavallo said. "We spread it in the salads. But nobody gets mad about it. 'So what if they don't smell like a rose? They're all in the same condition.'"

GAVE WIFE MINK COATS; ENTERTAINED FOR WOMEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—William A. Nickel, confessed swindler who cheated his employer out of nearly a million dollars, bought his wife $40,000 worth of jewelry, plus two mink coats, then set himself up in a $10-a-day love nest where he entertained other women, police reported today.

The hideaway of the $100-a-week cashier of the Mergenthaler Linotype company was a hotel suite in midtown Manhattan where he entertained women lavishly, purchased scotch whiskey by the case and gave bellboys $20 tips, police said. Evidence of Nickel's high living was uncovered by the district attorney's office yesterday following an intensive investigation of the $832,000 swindle.

FACE THE FACTS

Ohio Farmers, as well as those of the Nation as a whole, can face the future with the assurance of long-time price support legislation which is unprecedented in agricultural history.

This is the so-called Steagall amendment, adopted in 1941 and extended by later enactments. It requires that prices of most farm products be supported at 90 percent of parity or more until at least two years (after January 1) following the official end of the war - or - until at least January 1, 1949.

By a combination of loans, purchases and payments, the government is prepared to maintain this "floor" under the farmers return. While farm product prices generally are above the floor at present, the assurance is there that the general average price for each commodity will not be allowed to drop below specified levels.

Importance of this legislation is evident from the fact that after World War I farm product prices in the nation as a whole dropped 41 per cent in just one year, from 1920 to 1921.

Farmers: Look At The Record

In the field of agriculture the achievements of the Roosevelt and Truman administrations are outstanding.

- Farm income is seven times as great today as it was in 1932.
- Farm assets are 10 times as great as liabilities.
- Farm products are at an all-time high.
- Farm foreclosures last year were only one-twentieth of the number in 1932.
- Farm mortgage indebtedness has been reduced by almost one-half.
- Far-sighted soil conservation measures are increasing fertility.

Here are the average prices for some of the important farm commodities in Ohio in 1945, compared with prewar, the depression-low year, and the 1929 "boom" years

Farmers: The Question Is . . .

Does American agriculture want to return to the widespread bankruptcy and foreclosures experienced under the last Republican administration? We think not.

Farmers: The Answer Is . . .

On Election Day when you go to the polls, cast your ballot for the Democratic Party - the Farmer's Party - the Working Man's party - the party of the Liberal. In short, it is the Nation's Party. Vote the straight Democratic ticket.

PICKETS AND BEDS

THIS troublesome year of 1946 may go down in history as the "Year of the Picket Line." To a casual observer in a surprising number of cities, the prevailing picture on the horizon has been labor union representatives displaying their signs and making public appeals for their cause.

Next to this outward manifestation, perhaps, has been the less obvious and even more effective display of labor power in the hotels. Even when guests could find shelter, they have sometimes had to submit to the hardship and inconvenience of making their own beds.

In the long run, though, this humiliation may serve a good purpose, as many a weary housewife and many a hotel employee will agree. There is no essential reason, in the nature of things, why men should not learn the art of bed-making and practise it accordingly, whether abroad or at home. If we know the women of this nation, the men will be learning it. Navy men, we believe, have a running start at this branch of education.

NECESSARY EXPORT

WITH American automobiles falling apart and new ones as scarce as beef-steak, some people wonder why six out of every 100 new cars made are shipped abroad. In Brazil there have been riots over export of agricultural products while citizens are caught between inflation and food shortages. England's labor party has had a hard time explaining shipment of its limited metal goods beyond the British Isles while home manufacturers are stymied for lack of machine parts.

All this is evidence that most major countries are undertaking an export program. It's the old balance of trade idea at work again, after long disruption by the war.

Though it may seem difficult for home folks to do without what they need while it goes beyond their shores, this small beginning of future export is important. World trade, in this era of a foreshortened globe, is the life of domestic economy for practically every nation.

NO HARD FEELINGS

OHIO'S Republican gubernatorial candidate, Thomas Herbert, ran smack into the Democratic contender, the present Governor, Frank J. Lausche, in a hotel the other day. Said the Republican, "Hello Governor." Replied the governor, "Hello Tom", and both shook hands warmly. "I'll be taking you over in a couple of hours at that debate tonight," said the Republican. "Well anyway, if I don't win, I hope you get it," saluted the Democrat.

And that's a nice story. Too bad such things can't happen more often in the field of politics.

It's easier to pay war penalties than to repair the damage done.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—The disarmament topic came up fast, hot and big. Stalin prepared the way for it in his completely directed government radio and news advices and then his Molotov opened the subject in such a large manner at the UNA opening where he crowded such immediate vital questions as the election Tuesday back from the top headlines. The topic itself was rather plainly advanced to cover a change of diplomatic tactics from the Paris conference to this one. The Russians did not do very well at Paris or in the elections held recently in Berlin. They urgently needed a new line. The old bulldozing veto, threat and force tactics were not getting them anywhere excepting into a growing world unpopularity. So they loosened up a mite, or rather a shade of a mite, in letting UNA discuss vetoism and came forward with the rather belligerently presented demand of Mr. Molotov that we outlaw our atomic bomb and otherwise curb our arms. So the whole realm of disarmament prospects was injected for a diplomatic strategic purpose into UNA, and drew a counter plan from the United States which went the idea one better.

Now you may study these plans and encounter plans in detail for days but the only safe conclusion is that disarmament has become a topic—a topic especially among people who do not know much about armament or among authorities who know but are not saying much frankly.

The last time the United States disarmed was after World War I when we scrapped ships. Voluntarily we offered our keels and blueprints to the world and secured adoption of a 5-5-3 ratio among the big powers. We found out this did not prevent war. World War II was bigger and worse. Indeed our very disarmament treaties permitted Japan to build herself up to a war against us. So we must realize at the outset that disarmament does not necessarily mean peace; indeed such a treaty may be a vehicle of opportunity for war. In short, while our people may be thinking in old terms of disarmament and peace, their hopeful hearts are ruling their memories, and peace might just as readily emanate from armament—good forceful armament which is too strong for anyone to attack.

Hopeful Americans may say the administration arms expenditures are running too high. They were $13.2 billions as last reported. I also think this is too high. Air corps leader General Spaatz has been writing magazine articles saying what you must have read in this spot much earlier, namely that the American frontier is now on the top of the world. One of our B-36s could carry 10,000 pounds of destructive agents (atom bombs) to Europe or Asia and return without refueling. He is speaking of modern armament even beyond the last war.

You can plainly see then that if armies and navies were cut finally by agreements now under discussion, peace might not eventuate. Then why not cut the air force, you may ask. Well, one of Stalin's government press announcements said he was not cutting his aviation or scientific wings any further—the two agencies of destruction most important to peace. You might better say, as the United States has peaceful intentions, why not keep our atomic bomb for use against anyone who would make war against us.

Washing Irritates Eczema

By HERMAN N. RUNDSEEN, M.D.
SOAP AND WATER are good skin cleansers, and ordinarily, nearly everybody prefers their use to that of any substitute, because of their invigorating effect.

Sometimes, however, in cases where there is a disorder of the skin, soap cannot be used because it may cause further irritation of an already irritated skin. For example, in eczema it is better not to cleanse the skin with soap.

Sulfated Oils
It has been suggested that what are known as sulfated oils are less irritating, since they are not as alkaline as soap, and alkalies may irritate the skin. These sulfated oils do not form a lather, but they do clean satisfactorily, because they take up the oils of the skin, and various types of dirt can then be easily wiped off. In fact, these sulfated oils can be used not only for cleansing, but also for removing ointments which have been put on the skin.

Eczema affecting the outer ear canal is similar to eczema of the skin. In the outer ear canal, there is not only the problem of cleansing the skin without causing irritation, but also of removing the ear wax or cerumen.

Dr. Robert P. Little of New

York suggests that a mixture of sulfated oil, liquid petrolatum and water may be used for general cleansing of the ear canal, especially when it is dry and scaly.

The mixture can be used equally well whether the skin is wet or dry. After it is applied to the dry skin it may be washed off with water.

Soften the Wax

In getting rid of wax in the ear canal, if it is hard it may be softened over a period of a few days by the use of drops of olive oil or glycerin but, even better, the sulfated oil may be employed. After the wax is softened, it can be removed by syringing the canal with warm water to which baking soda and the sulfated oil have been added.

Of course, when eczema of the external ear canal occurs, it is a good idea to consult an ear specialist concerning the most effective treatment to be employed. He will prescribe the proper ointments to be used to soothe the skin. Sometimes, X-ray treatments are also of value. However, no matter what treatment is employed, there will always be the problem of keeping the ear clean, and it would appear the sulfated oil mixture is quite useful for this purpose.

STARS SAY—

For Monday, November 4

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a very definite and soul-warming advance upon cherished goals, lofty ambitions and aspirations, as well as upon the attainment of the higher phases and fulfillments of heart's desire. Shrewd, sagacious and ardent formulation of plans and purposes should attain to expansive and gracious fruition, and this against tenacious obstacle, stern impediments and frustration.

The Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are in line for the attainment of fond hopes and wishes, desires and aspirations, long-cherished and planned for, and this with courage, logic, sound ideas and objectives, in which many obstructing and frustrating circumstances and discouragements might have delayed or thwarted.

It is a time for reaping richly, for rewards for worthy labors and objectives well worked out. Lofty ambitions and aspirations are under expansive and generous promise, to be nobly and generously fulfilled.

A child born on this day is endowed with the capacity, practical skills and plans for the gracious fulfillment of its highest hopes, wishes and aspirations. This in face of obstacle and impediments.

A Greek coin used today owes its name to iron. The drachma means "graspful." A little more than 2,000 years ago iron spits, or skewers, were used in Greece for money, and six of them were a handful. The name stuck, although the iron spits didn't.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

AFTER A FEW minutes Kirby continued, "Chris should know how it was with Alan and me. . . I loved Alan. It all happened so fast. Alan stopped in one afternoon to see mother. You see, she didn't marry Raphael until a week after Alan and I were married. So it wasn't unusual for young men to drop in to see her. They're all attracted to her, young and old. They always remember her. Raphael remembers her for four years. Part of it is that Mona Lisa smile of hers. Anyway, I was home the day Alan came. The new one, the made-over one. From one semester to the next I made myself over and lost 20 pounds. You've never been ugly. You've never been a fat girl. You don't know. It poisons you. You weren't at the tender age of nine taken out of a life you were meant for and put in a school where you were the fat girl, the victim of their jokes and cruelties, the little snob."

"Your mother didn't do that to you, did she, Kirby?"

"Oh, no, that was Andrew's work. The great Andrew, mother's second husband. He wanted to make a lady out of a little rough-neck, but out of his sight, of course. It took me a long time before I could deal with those kids, before I got it through my head that they were as miserable as I, that we were all what nice people call the victims of broken homes."

Not cooperative. Anti-social. That's what the people in school said about me. I didn't go back to school. I married Alan and we had two weeks, one week at the house, your house now, and another going out to the west coast and a few days there. That was all I never saw him again. I'll never see him again."

Kirby took a deep breath. "They looked alike, but Chris is a stronger person, more brilliant. Chris was my first love. I used to look at him through the keyhole when mother and Andrew had parties because they wouldn't have me around much. How I used to go back to school and draw Chris's face on the margin of my notebook in class. Oh, the time you spend dreaming of things that will never happen. . . Alan was such a good person, sweet. He made me feel needed, that there was something I could do to make another person happy, that I had something to give. I've always been the problem kid."

Lydia said, "And now I understand you much better, Kirby. There were still many questions she wanted to ask."

Kirby said, "I'm not going with mother and Raphael. I don't want my son brought up in a foreign country when his father died defending this one and . . . well, there are other reasons, too." She kissed the top of Alan's soft head.

"I want to be a good mother to him, the best. Isn't it funny that all the time I was with Alan I kept thinking, 'There's so little time for him to be happy. In two weeks it will be all over.' . . . I was wrong. It will never be over. Now I'm making our son happy and I'll go on doing that. I can't see Alan dead out there on that stool. I can't see that at all. I see him again, the Alan there, starting all over again. He hasn't been taken away from me. He's been given back to me, as a little baby. I can't make many promises to him, but there's one I can make right now. He's always going to do the thing he was meant to do."

A door was opening. There were voices. There was time only for Lydia to say, "It's still your room at our house, Kirby. Yours and Alan's."

Kirby's mouth drew in again. "Thanks, but I'm not coming in." Then Theo, bringing beauty and poise and a subtle scent, was coming in followed by the nurse and Raphael. Lydia's mind dismissed the nurse after she saw that the nurse was a kind, sensible looking person who beamed at once over the baby.

It was impossible not to see that Raphael was younger than Theo, he who walked with a cutlike grace that suggested how beautifully he must dance. Tall, slender, dark-haired, with olive skin tones and a mouth charmingly crooked when he smiled, he seemed not to live here, but to be only a guest. He had also a nervous look as though a sudden noise would make him bolt.

He kissed Lydia's hand and said with only a slight accent, "So you are Christopher's Lydia. I have heard so much about you, so many flattering things." "Want to add some more now that you've seen her?" Kirby asked roughly. But she was smiling.

Raphael inclined his smooth dark head toward his stepdaughter and spoke to Lydia. "She is so—how do you say—to the point?" Theo's eyes moved between her husband and her daughter. "They are always teasing," she said.

When Alan began to cry, Kirby took him away and Theo and the nurse followed. Raphael held a silver lighter to Lydia's cigarette and inquired about Chris. Presently Theo, who had removed her mink coat and black hat with half a veil and who was wearing a smart-

DEFINITELY WORST LEAD

FROM AMONG A choice of evils for the opening lead against a suit contract—when the bidding has given no information about the declarer's side suits—the underlead of an ace is usually the worst. That is because there is such a likelihood that the declarer or dummy has the king, with a singleton in one holding or the other, which would cause the shutting out of your ace. If you feel you must lead the suit, the ace is ordinarily the less risky opening.

At several tables of a duplicate, the bidding was the same, and in all those cases West led a diamond, either the A or the 2. Where it was the small card, the K of course won. One able declarer then ruffed the diamond 6 in dummy, scored the spade A, then put West in with the K, having counted on West for all the high cards. That end-played West, assuring an extra trick. A club or heart return would have shut West out of any trick in its suit, and the diamond actually returned enabled South to avoid a heart loser by ruffing in dummy and discarding his heart 8.

In the other case of the diamond 2 lead, a habitual finesser lost to all three of West's kings, yet made his contract. Where the diamond A was led, West repeated the suit to the K. The inept declarer who tried three finesses there was set, and the one who took his spade A and then threw West in with the K barely made his contract by that device, instead of an extra trick.

Inside WASHINGTON

Rogge's Justice Department
Associates Cool Over Firing

Meat Industry Reported Set
To Produce at Full Capacity

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Former mass sedition trial prosecutor, O. John Rogge, didn't get much sympathy from his justice department associates when he was fired for using material from a confidential report in a public speech.

There's a feeling that Rogge muffed the sedition case and thereby cast a shadow on the legal ability of the justice department's lawyers.

One attorney, who helped gather evidence for the original case—which was entirely rebuilt when Rogge took over—asserted privately that "We could have wound up the whole case in three weeks and gotten some convictions."

That lawyer took the view that Rogge departed from sound courtroom evidence and embarked on an ideological excursion over the world.

THE UNITED STATES meat industry "is ready to bounce back into full production despite the serious slump in its operations during the immediate post-war period."

This was the conclusion drawn by a board representing the agriculture department of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

In a report labeled "Our Meat Supply" the Chamber maintained that "the experiences of the last few years have not permanently impaired the productive capacity or the efficiency of the meat industry."

"There still is a near-record number of cattle and a sufficient number of hogs on which to base such further expansion of production as the country may require," the Chamber added.

The report charged that during recent years "meat production

has been subjected to various regulatory measures of a complex and temporary character which have created confusion and uncertainty."

MANY GOVERNMENT OBSERVERS think OPA will be out of business before the end of the year. They say OPA is moving faster on decontrol than the speedup decreed by President Truman in his meat address.

Some 3,500 controls were removed up to Oct. 15 and OPA's huge war-time staff has been whittled to skeleton size.

Some experts believe the government will abandon all controls as quickly as possible and let private industry assume the responsibility—and the headache—of seeing to it that prices are kept in line.

MRS. CHARLES GRIDLEY, a secretary of Rep. Joseph W. Martin (R) of Massachusetts, is being kidded about her foresight in having two sets of Capitol offices cleaned during the congressional adjournment.

Her boss, as House minority leader, has offices hidden away in a hard-to-find corner of the Capitol building. Mrs. Gridley got tired of the dust-faded colors and ordered the walls washed for the first time in six years.

However, if the Republicans win control of the House, Martin will become speaker and move into the sumptuous quarters now occupied by Sam Rayburn (D) of Texas.

So, when Congress adjourned, Mrs. Gridley called Capitol Architect David Lynn and suggested that the speaker's offices be overhauled, too.

SENATE OFFICIALS feel certain now they have uncovered the last historical documents from the nooks and crannies of the Capitol building's remote, vaulted underground storerooms.

Commenting on the recent discovery of priceless documents relating to the never-fulfilled plans to burying President Washington beneath the Capitol, one veteran Senate official said:

"That's the last of them. I can vouch for that. We've gone through everything."

The Washington documents were turned over to the National Archives.

Miss Joan Judy Bride Of Orin W. Dreisbach

Ceremony Is Read In Cincinnati Church

On November 1, the wedding anniversary of her parents, Miss Joan Judy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mills Judy, Cincinnati, became the bride of Orin W. Dreisbach, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Dreisbach, Pickaway township. The Rev. Edward E. Moreland performed the candle light service in Walnut Hill Christian church, Cincinnati, at 8:30 p. m.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a white satin gown decorated with seed pearl embroidery which outlined the heart shaped neckline and edged the flaring peplum at the waistline. The veil of rosepointe lace worn by Mrs. Mills at her own wedding, extended the full length of the train of her gown. In her arms she carried a bouquet of white orchids combined with fuchsia and white cyclamen blossoms.

Miss Ann Patton Biddle was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Mrs. West Shall Jr., Miss Nancy Lee Westerman, Miss Mary Ellen Sprott and Miss LaVerne Knose. Little Eleanor Kinney served as flower girl.

BROWNS, HAWKS ARE BEATEN IN FINAL SECONDS

The Cleveland Browns, first-place team in the All-America conference, and Miami, the tail-enders, had one thing in common today—a complaint that yesterday's games were a half-minute too long.

The New York Yankees defeated Miami, 24 to 21, on Ace Parker's touchdown pass with 26 seconds to go. The Los Angeles Dons nipped the Browns, 17 to 16, on Joe Aguirre's field goal with 20 seconds to play. The games, the only ones played Sunday, caused no change in standings, except that New York strengthened its grip on the eastern division lead. Cleveland still leads the West.

Miami, struggling hard to improve its dismal record, scored twice in the last period, on a plunge by Don Reese and a pass from Charley Price to Monk Gafford, and appeared to have a safe lead. But New York drove from its 12-yard line to the Seahawk goal in 11 plays, most of them passes by Parker, and scored on an 11-yard heave to Jack Russell.

Cleveland got off to a 16 to 7 first-half lead over the Dons, but Los Angeles came back to tally in the last period on a 30-yard drive after Tom Colella failed to get a fourth-down punt away, and then Aguirre's kick climaxed a late Los Angeles rally.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Peace can never be static. Today it rests on the science and air fronts. To consider it seriously you would not, like Stalin, talk through newspapers, or like Molotov beligerently present it as a sort of diplomatic weapon at a conference.

You can see all these factors of peace plainly in your daily lives. A man does not disarm himself, or throw away his fire hose (as Mr. Roosevelt once put it), or even lend-lease it to a neighbor in hopes that the neighbor may do likewise. To consider such things you would have to be rather sure of your neighbors first. Would you not first insist on knowing for sure your neighbor's state of mind, whether his intentions were similar to yours?

World peace then hangs upon the state of the world, as much as upon armaments. Plainly no thinking man can be sufficiently glib to believe a state of mind has been established upon which disarmament can be built with any confidence. If Russia wants disarmament and peace it should first help establish the sound grounds for it, first contribute to a state of well being which has some authenticity and into which confidence may safely be placed. That would lead to real disarmament. To establish such grounds will be a long, careful and tedious business—a genuinely serious business, and not at all like the diplomatic discussion which the United Nations assembly has been strategically hearing.

Opinions expressed by the writer in this column are the views of the author and not necessarily those of the Circleville Herald.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Howard Barlow will mark the 99th anniversary of the death of Felix Bartholdy Mendelssohn, when he conducts his symphony orchestra in the German composer's "Wedding March" from "Midsummer Night's Dream" on the Monday concert at 8:30 P.M., EST, over NBC. After a fruitful but short life of 38 years, Mendelssohn died on November 4, 1847. Barlow also will lead his orchestra in "Dancing Doll" by Poldini and a medley from Victor Herbert's "Babes in Toyland" including "Can't Do That Sum," "Toyland" and "March of the Toys." Barlow's guest artist will be the Metropolitan Opera soprano, Eleanor Steber, who will sing Cole Porter's "Night and Day," "Do Not Go, My Love" by Hageman, "I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls" from "The Bohemian Girl" by Baife and "Save Me A Dream," contemporary song by Silver, built upon a theme from the Fifth Symphony of Tchaikovsky.

RADIO THEATER

Joseph Cotten and Catherine McLeod will play the leading roles in "I've Always Loved You," featured presentation of the Lux

Radio Theatre, Monday, at 9 P.M. (EST) over CBS. William Keighley is the producer of the full-hour dramatic program and Lou Silvers arranges and conducts background music. "I've Always Loved You" tells the story of a talented young pianist, played by Catherine McLeod, who falls in love with her teacher, a famous concert artist. Joseph Cotten has the part of the self-centered teacher who is ignorant of her devotion. They break up after he accuses her of stealing the spotlight from him in a joint concert appearance. She returns home and marries her childhood sweetheart. After several years the former teacher and pupil meet again—when she and her husband bring their talented young daughter to him for an appraisal of her prospects as a con-

Pickaway County Rural Youth Honor Guests At Barbecue

4-H AND FFA MEMBERS ARE GIVEN AWARDS

Hundreds Attend Party Held In Memorial Hall For Young Farmers

Barbecue and recognition program Saturday in Memorial hall was attended by several hundred 4-H and Future Farmers of America members, their parents and friends. County Agent Larry A. Best, who was in charge of the affair, Monday issued a statement on behalf of the committee thanking the donors who made the event possible.

The statement: "To our knowledge, no other county in the state has the fine support from individuals, business men and industries for 4-H and FFA work, as does Pickaway county. As leaders of these two worthy groups of young folk we wish to sincerely thank you for your expression of encouragement to them."

The statement bore the signatures of Agent Best, E. Genevieve Alley, home demonstration agent, and K. L. Holtrey, vocational agriculture teacher.

Awards and trophies were presented to a number of outstanding farm boys and girls. The barbecue was arranged in recognition of achievements of the county's farm youth who had a big part in the successful 1940 County Fair. Those attending dined on prime beef from the grand champion steer which weighed 1,255 pounds and won in the County Fair competition. It was sold at auction Sept. 13 at the fair to a committee of Circleville business men for $815.75—or 65 cents a pound. The champion steer had been entered in the County Fair by Paul Marshall.

For two years J. W. Eshelman and Sons sponsored the annual 4-H and FFA recognition in the form of a barbecue but this year many other organizations and individuals helped to sponsor the event.

Dick Robinson was in charge of arrangements for the food and won praise from the committee for a good job. Preparation of the beef was supervised by Larry Kunkle, Ohio State University meat specialist.

Following is a list of the donors who cooperated in the affair: First National Bank, Heffner Grain Company, Brehmer's Greenhouses, Second National Bank, Container Corporation of America, George VanCamp, T. D. VanCamp, Consolidated Telephone Company, Pickaway Grain Company, John

MOTORISTS WILL FIND SHORTAGE OF ANTI-FREEZE

As if the average motorist didn't have enough worries, automotive supply men of the Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, Columbus, throw in this prediction for cold weather drivers:

There will be a shortage of all types of anti-freeze.

The reason, they claim, is due this year to plant strikes and container shortages. The supply of permanent anti-freeze will be shorter than other types.

It takes a heap o'living in a house to make it a home. Whenever you face a money need—Think at once of our bank as the place to borrow the money.
